—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright 1929, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

MAJ. JOHN COOLIDGE, son of Calvin Coolidge, was married yesterday to Miss Florence Trumbull, daughter of the governor of Connecticut.

The nation knows the qualities that young Coolidge should, and doubtless will, inherit.

There might be a Coolidge in the White House in 1937, named Calvin. There may be other Coolidges there much later.

Senator Howell of Nebraska asks President Hoover to make Washington dry, because we ought to have one sample dry city. He says the President should stop bootlegging at the Capitol.

The President is an able man. But nobody on this earth could make Washington really dry.

How could President Hoover prevent Senator Howell of Nebraska from taking a bottle of whiskey from a white or colored bootlegger, and handing him $5 in his private office?

That is how the thing is done, although bootlegging by Senator Howell happens to be unthinkable.

An individual who makes whiskey secretly sells it secretly to somebody who sells it again secretly to the individual who intends to drink it. How are you going to stop that? All the President's horses and all the President's men couldn't do it.

The only hope is to create among American citizens respect for the law and the Constitution. That seems a slow process.

Farming has its pleasures and its pains.

This writer, farmer by profession, writer by necessity, was grieved to see on his farm in New Jersey magnificent ears of corn, each with the marks of a borer at the small end.

On the other hand, it was a pleasure to see in one field planted with corn, grown originally in Mexico, developed in California, a straight line of cornstalks 17 feet high, the ears so far from the ground that no farmhand could reach one to see if the borers had climbed up. Stalks at the root as thick as a man's arm.

From the writer's alfalfa ranch on the California Mojave desert comes this news:

"The yellow butterflies have been busy in the alfalfa. The butterfly mates when two days old, lays eggs the following day, the worms hatch in three to seven days, feed on tender leaves of the alfalfa plant. To discourage the butterflies we cut hay before the bloom appears, and to kill the worms the hay is cut close to the ground, and the checks are given excessive moisture."

Farming is not a dull occupation, especially when valuable young colts get caught in the wire fence and fire sweeps through the pines.

If the President's farm commission will tell this farmer how to fight cornborers and yellow butterflies, this petitioner will ever pray.

Human beings are gradually approaching an escape from this small earth, to which we once thought ourselves tied "until death do us part."

As serious scientists were discussing flying 25 years ago, so scientists in Germany are now discussing trips to the moon by rocket.

It is necessary to start with power enough to escape the earth's gravitation and then arrange for a safe landing, taking sufficient air for a short stay on our satellite without atmosphere, plus arrangements for a return trip.

Strangely constructed fish living two miles down in the ocean cannot live if brought to the surface.

Man, built to live under this heavy atmosphere, with a body adapted to the earth's power of gravitation, could hardly hope to live removed from the bottom of his air-ocean.

But thought can conquer difficulties, and man has shown that whatever he can imagine he can do.

Twelve steamships brought 13,000 Americans from Europe yesterday. Some, female, took the cure in Paris, in dressmakers' shops. Others devoted attention to what they call "th good" beer of Munich; some went to see the Winged Victory, what is left of her, and the Venus of Milo, with the irreplaceable arms.

GIRL WITNESS IN REINSTEIN KILLING FOUND

'RED HEAD' ON FINAL RIDE WITH SLAIN 'SLAVER'

She and Man on Way From Pennsylvania to Bare Boston Gang Murder

The first "break" in the investigation of the slaying of Samuel Reinstein came today when word was received that Inspector Timothy Donovan is on his way to Boston with two highly important witnesses.

Inspector Donovan, who has been in Bethlehem, Pa., since last week, wired Asst. Dist.-Atty. Frederick T. Doyle he is coming with "Jackie, the Red Head," and Harry Malaga.

"Jackie, the Red Head," was a girl friend of Eddie "Duke" Winger, first victim of the white slave war, which eventually took the life of Reinstein.

Malaga admits he was the operation of the Pennsylvania car, identity of which was established by the Boston Evening American, and in which police say Reinstein was "put on the spot."

SEE VICTIM TWICE

With a girl named Helen, believed to be Helen Gordon, Reinstein and Margaret Wheeler, Malaga drove through the South End on Sept. 11, two days before the killing.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Doyle's investigation has revealed that during this tour the victim was pointed out to the slayers twice, so they would not make a second mistake. In August Jake Resnick had been shot down in Philadelphia in the belief that he was Reinstein.

That day, the investigation determined, the two slayers stood at Shawmut ave. and Dwight st. and again at Dover and Washington sts. and watched their prospective victim ride by.

Both "Jackie" and Harry Malaga have been sought for more than a week, and the fact they have been rounded up and are coming to Boston willingly was cause for elation on the part of Dist. Atty. William

Heroine, 16, Helps Rescue Four Children in Roxbury Blaze

Miss Margaret Lodge, after giving the alarm for fire in house on Norfolk st., Roxbury, helped Mrs. Helen Bentley get her four children to safety from the second floor of the building. (Staff photos.)

John Bentley, 5; Boxer, the dog; Irene, 6, and Leo, 2, were rushed out burning house in their night clothes by their mother and Miss Lodge, who discovered the fire. You can see that Boxer feels as important about it as anyone, and the kiddies think if it's all right with Boxer, it is with them.

TRUMBULL TO ADD FORTUNE TO GIFT OF COOLIDGE

John and Florence on Secret Honeymoon; Think Couple Are in New England

Northampton, Sept. 24 (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. John Coolidge paused in their honeymoon trip today for a visit to the Coolidge home in this city. The young couple spent about an hour with the bridegroom's parents and then departed, in a northerly direction, in the bride's roadster.

Plainville, Ct., Sept. 24—When Florence Trumbull and John Coolidge, newlyweds, return from their honeymoon they will find $50,000 awaiting them, the gift of Calvin Coolidge, father of the bridegroom.

A close friend of the Trumbull family disclosed today that the former President had established a trust fund for the amount above stated as a present to the bridal couple.

While specific details were unavailable, it is understood that within a certain number of years, the principal will be at the disposal of John.

And in tune with this gift from the Coolidge side of the latest romantic liaison, Gov. John H. Trumbull, father of the bride, was reported as planning to settle a large sum on his daughter.

Looking economics in the face, nobody has ever imagined that a Connecticut heiress and the son of a former President, both reared in comparative comfort, could subsist on 20-odd dollars a week.

This is the stipend that John is earning as clerk in the offices of the New Haven railroad in New Haven.

However, it is said that a raise in salary is to be given him on his return to duty.

But today the question of dollars and cents is far from the minds of the honeymoon couple who are somewhere in America.

MAY STOP FOR DANCES.

At Hartford, the honeymooners changed to Florence's new red roadster, a gift of her father. Friends expect that the pair will motor through New England. The fact that both John and Florence love dancing suggests that they will stop for a day or so at roadside inns which promise entertainment.

Other suppositions as to the destination of the newlyweds include a trip to Florence, Maine's Maine camp, near Moosehead Lake, a boat trip to Bermuda or an automobile jaunt down to Florida.

No matter what arcadia is chosen by the new Mr and Mrs. Coolidge, John must be back to work within two weeks, the time allotted him for a vacation.

While Florence gave up the pomp and glory of a White House wedding in favor of what she thought would be a simple New England family affair, her nuptials turned out to be a national rush.

But the desire for privacy by young Coolidge kept the press at a distance. Perhaps influenced by the Lindbergh wedding, John frowned a cold New England frown on any intrusion by news representatives. Seven reporters were permitted to talk to a spokeswoman as to what atmosphere prevailed in the old Congregational Church where the

MINISTER ASKS DIVORCE

For the first time in many years a Greater Boston clergyman appeared in court today at East Cambridge seeking a divorce.

The minister in question, Rev Walter H. Commons, pastor of First Congregational Church, Waltham, charged his wife, Evelyn T., of Brooklyn, with religious incompatability. The wife did not contest the action, which was taken under advisement by Judge John C. Leggatt of Middlesex probate court after he had heard the minister and his 20-year-old son, William. Both testified in such a low tone that reporters in attendance were unable to hear what was said.

An attorney attached to the law firm of Dunbar, Nutter & McClennen questioned Rev. Mr. Commons, standing within three feet of him and an equal distance from the judge, with the result that, in effect, the hearing was private. The voices of the attorney and the witnesses were practically inaudible.

In his divorce papers Rev. Mr Commons charged that "because of religious views divergent from his" his wife was cruel and abusive on April 1, 1921, at Whitinsville and at various other times and places. He also charged that she struck him December 1, 1926. The couple were married 28 years ago.

Got Ticket for Series? It's Bogus!

Chicago, Sept. 24 (AP)—Have you a World's Series ticket yet? If you have, it's just too bad—it's counterfeit.

William Veeck, president of the Chicago Cubs, issued a warning today against spurious tickets which he said already have made their appearance.

"Official tickets for the series are now being printed," Veeck said. "They won't reach the hands of uncle purchasers before Oct. 2 or 3. Anybody who produces a ticket now is holding a counterfeit."

Stolen Art Work Located in U. S.

Belgrade, Jugoslavia, Sept. 24 (AP)—After 500 years in the Zagreb Cathedral, a priceless religious painting in Triptych is said to have been stolen and now hangs in the Cleveland, O., museum, from which the Jugoslav government has instructed its legation in Washington to take steps for its recovery.

It is supposed to have been replaced by a mediocre work and the real article sold by a French art dealer to American buyers for $10,000, said to be far below its real value.

Playwright Kinkead Run Down by Auto

New York, Sept. 24 (AP)—Cleves Kinkead, 45, author of "Common Clay" and other plays, was struck by an auto and suffered a fractured skull. At Flower Hospital he was said to have only a slight chance of recovering. The accident occurred in Park ave.

GERRIT FORT HEADS BOARD

Gerrit Fort, president of Raymond, Whitcomb & Co., travel agents, was today elected chairman of the governing board of the Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce to succeed Harris Livermore, Boston banker, who was killed in the trans-continental airplane crash in Arizona several weeks ago.

Mr. Fort is an authority on transportation. During the war he was assistant director of passenger traffic on railroads under government control.

In 1919 he became a vice-president of the Boston & Maine Railroad, in charge of passenger traffic. Previous to that he had served in executive capacity on several of the largest railroads of the country.

Artist Will Bares Fear of Grave

Fear of burial alive or cremation before death were evident in a request in the will of John H. Tarbell, Framingham artist, filed for probate today in Middlesex court.

Tarbell directed that he cremated at Groton Cemetery "when physicians pronounce my body absolutely lifeless."

The artist provided for $10,000 in private bequests to relatives and gave $500 to the West Groton public library, $300 to the Salvation Army fresh air camp at Sharon, $200 to the Animal Rescue League and $200 to the Boston Y. M. C. U.

14 NEW HAVEN CARS DERAILED

The accident occurred when the locomotive was the first to plunge from the tracks and was followed by 13 others. Twenty-one other cars remained as they were.

Service was disrupted and passengers in the morning gasoline train which leaves Lowell from Framingham at 6:40 were obliged to walk around the wreckage to take another gasoline car which had been brought up from Taunton to complete their journey.

Trucks from the New England Transportation Co., a New Haven subsidiary, were utilized to expedite shipment of perishable and fast freight. It was expected the line would be cleared by night.

Not all of the damaged cars were filled with freight, but railroad officials said they would be unable immediately to estimate the damage. The cause of the derailment had not been ascertained.

$5000 Liquor in Liner's Water Tank

New York, Sept. 24 (AP)—A raiding party of customs officials today confiscated 800 bottles of champagne and cordials, valued at $5000, on board the French liner De Grasse. The liquor was concealed in a water tank. Several men who were unloading it fled when the customs men appeared. No arrests were made.

The captain of the liner was summoned to an inquiry to fix responsibility for the liquor.

U.S. Income Tax Slash in March, Promised

Washington, Sept. 24 (AP)—A substantial reduction in taxes, favored by President Hoover, will be recommended to the regular sessions of Congress next December by the Treasury, to become effective next March 15. Just what form the reduction will take has not been determined.

It was learned today at the [illegible] treasury that the government's financial condition in prospect for the coming years is regarded as warranting a slash in taxes, and with this in view, experts will start work within a week to determine how much of a cut can be made and how it will be distributed.

The financial officials who have watched the government revenue this year, which at the close of business September 20 exceeded the collections for the first two and a half months of the last fiscal year by $118,936,480, pointed to continued prosperity and large income tax collections as the basis upon which the tax reduction would be made.

Since July 1, the total govern-marriage ceremony was performed.

The reporters were permitted to gaze through a fence at the reception on the Trumbull estate. Sixty State troopers of Connecticut, wearing borrowed black gloves, were drafted from their enforcement duties to keep the public and the press at their proper distance.

Mr. Coolidge, on leaving the church, waved his high silk hat at the crowd and smiled affably.

That there was no faltering in the responses by either party during the marriage ceremony and that John held the platinum wedding ring with a sure hand.

MAY GO TO MAINE.

Aside from the bride in her bridal gown of ivory satin, perhaps the most strikingly dressed person at the wedding was Mrs. Calvin Coolidge. She wore a charming costume of dark beige with a panne velvet hat to match and brown shoes and gloves. She wore a shoulder corsage of iris and carried a bouquet of roses.

The attendance among the 84 specially invited guests to the church included E. O. Stevens, 55-year-old woodsman who left Maine for the first time. The Trumbulls sent a plane to Boston to pick up Stevens.

Florence made quite a fuss over the old woodsman whom she has known from childhood, he being in charge of her father's Maine camp. This supported the report that the honeymooners would go to the north woods.

One of the gayest of the guests was 86-year-old Mrs. Robert A. Usher, grandmother of Florence. She wore her 59-year-old wedding dress to the wedding. It was the same one in which she was married in the very same church.

MUSIC AS A GIFT.

During the reception she sat in the Trumbull house in a rocking chair with her cane beside her and held a receiving line all her own. Incidentally, the grandmother gave Florence a paisley shawl which was hung on the wall for all to see.

Among the wedding presents was an intangible but priceless one. Eddie Wittstein, who used to play at the Amherst rooms, furnished the music for the wedding fiesta. He had promised one time at Amherst, when Florence and John danced to his music, that he would play at their wedding for a present.

The reception at the Trumbull estate which followed the wedding rites was a gala affair during the bridal couple departed on their honeymoon in the chill September dusk.

As the new Mrs. Coolidge ascended the stairs of the home to doff the long trailed ivory satin wedding gown for her traveling costume she tossed her bridal bouquet into the midst of the guests grouped below.

It was caught by Miss Erma Funk of Bristol, Ct., from whose father the bride and groom purchased furniture for their four-room, $75-a-month New Haven apartment.

COOLIDGES MOTOR HOME

Soon afterward the bride appeared in her traveling costume, a three-piece ensemble of hunter's green transparent velvet with a blouse of egg-shell satin. Her hat was of green velvet to match her gown, and her coat was of black cresaella, trimmed with a large collar and cuffs of natural mink.

ment income has amounted to $921,237,506, while the income tax collections for the year 1928 have totaled, up to September 20, approximately $1,800,000,000, an increase over the same period of the previous year of approximately $271,000,000.

In addition, the treasury expects to collect approximately $500,000,000 income tax when the December payments are made.

While not predicting that the prospective tax cut to be proposed in December would be of the $300,000,000 variety, officials said it would be large.

A reduction in the tax on earned incomes is regarded as likely to be one of the principal proposals of the program. The Treasury has not committed itself to specific phase, but Secretary Mellon in the past has said he was in sympathy with lowered rates on earned income.

"Bootleg Jazz" in Russia Defies Law

Leningrad, Soviet Russia, Sept. 24 (INS)—A $ruble fine for dancing the fox trot or charleston is being imposed upon visitors to the open-air pavilion at the Park of Culture. A vigilance committee of 15 encircles the floor to see that the ban on jazz steps is carried out.

The Soviets are opposed to both the late American dance steps and jazz music, although some of the young members of the trade unions participate in "boodleg music and bootleg dances." One new dance is the "dirigible," in which the dancers kick out their feet sideways.

ferred its headquarters to Rhode Island.

This ring, it was learned, has been running drugs to houses controlled by the white slave ring in Boston.

Department of Justice agents who left Boston for Pennsylvania are experienced in running down violators of the Mann Act.

11 HOUSES IN HUB

She unburdened herself to Foley and her father, E. A. Wheeler, Baltimore business man, who came here. She revealed that although only 21, she has a hard-bought knowledge of the ramifications of the white slave ring, having become associated with its members when 16.

It was revealed that the ring operates houses on a circuit much like a theatrical chain, with girls filling engagements of from eight to twelve weeks in a city.

The ring is said to maintain 11 houses in Boston, and there are hookups with independent resorts. The investigations have revealed that girls, whose ages range from 15 to 21, are conveyed by automobile from Pennsylvania to Boston and New York.

POLITICIANS INVOLVED.

It is this angle which has brought the federal agents into the case, and their co-operation is expected by the authorities to clean up Boston as it has never been cleaned before.

One of the most startling revelations made by the investigators is the fact that the ring is said to have connections with some of the most powerful politicians in this city.

QUITS FEMALE COLLEGE FOR HARVARD

Ralph Boas, Jr., 17-year-old youth, the only male student last year among 1000 girls at Mt. Holoke College for Women, at South Hadley, who was reported to have left Mt. Holyoke to shun women, today began his studies at Harvard.

Although young Boas declined to state why he left Mt. Holyoke, friends declared that his shift to Harvard has nothing to do with women. It was explained that Boas is an unusually serious-minded student and intends to bury himself in his studies.

The boy, who is bespectacles and slender, with a slight stoop, indicating much burning of the "midnight oil" bears the aspect of a devotee of his labor learning, and none of the earmarks of the "whoopee" college freshman.

STARTED AT MT. HOLYOKE

"It was not technically an enrolled student at Mt. Holyoke," Boas protested today. "My status was that of 'visitor' at the classes," he said.

"But did you take courses?" asked the reporter.

"Oh, yes," said Boas. "I took mathematics, Greek and German."

"My father is professor of English at Mt. Holyoke," he explained, "and my mother is a teacher of English at Wheaton." The latter is a college for women at Norton.

The boy did not reveal much interest in the prospect of athletic and social activities at Harvard. "I want to devote myself to my studies," he said. As to details of his college course at Harvard, Boas said he did not care to go into particulars beyond the statement that he is taking up classical studies, for which his studies at Mt. Holyoke were a preparation.

WANTS NO LIMELIGHT.

He expressed a determination to keep out of the limelight at Harvard.

Born in the state of Washington, young Boas said he has lived "all over the country," traveling with his parents who have taught in various colleges. "My parents are somewhat annoyed at the publicity I have received," he said, "and are fearful that it may handicap me in my career at Harvard."

Boas is quartered in Perkis Hall, one of the new freshman dormitories on Boylston st., Cambridge, overlooking the Charles River Parkway and the river.

Vatican City, Sept. 24 (AP)—To give pilgrims from the United States and Latin America opportunity to visit Pope Pius during solemn celebrations marking the 50th anniversary of his priesthood, the jubilee year will be prolonged for six months from its normal expiration, Dec. 20, according to the Vatican correspondent of the newspaper Tribuna.

The spring of 1930 will be marked by the canonization of new saints and beatifications.

Dynamite Used in New Orleans Strike

New Orleans, Sept. 24 (AP)—A renewal of street car strike violence caused police to take added precaution Monday, while they simultaneously widened their campaign against "free ride" automobiles.

A South Claiborourne ave. car was damaged badly by a charge of dynamite which was exploded beneath it. About two feet of track were torn up and a hole was blasted through the floor of the car. Nobody was hurt.

London Goes 'Dry' in 32-Day Drought

London, Sept. 24 (AP)—London is experiencing the worst drought in 71 years, a 32-day lack of substantial rainfall eclipsing the city period of the summer. The Lea river, supplying a considerable area of eastern and northeastern London, is beginning to fall, causing great anxiety.

Garden watering from hoses or outside taps was stopped by the authorities several months ago.

ALLEN ORDERS SCHOOLSHIP FOOD INQUIRY

A full report of the cruise of the schoolship Nantucket, with particular reference to complaints that the food was both bad and inadequate, was ordered today by Governor Allen in a communication to the commissioners of the Massachusetts Nautical School.

DUE IN HUB TODAY

At the office of the State Commission on Administration and Finance it was learned the appropriation by the State for the vessel in 1928 was $34,000, of which about $25,000 was returned in revenue from the students and the Federal government.

With the investigation under way a boat load of fresh meat, vegetables and other supplies was taken on board the Nantucket today at Provincetown.

The ship is due in Boston today.

Arriving at Provincetown, Cadets flocked to restaurants exclaiming, "This is the first square meal we have had in months."

They told of the arrest of a hungry cadet who broke into the bread locker on the ship. He was put inthe brig for five days as punishment, it was said.

TOO WEAK TO WORK.

Several who had been stokers and helpers in the fireroom were especially bitter in complaints about food. "We were so weak we didn't feel much like shoveling coal," one said.

Petty retaliation by officers of the ship because of protests concerning food, were reported by others.

One cadet got two days in the "brig" for smoking a cigarette, it was declared. Pipes and cigars are the official "smokes" aboard ship, it was said.

3000 MOSLEMS ARE KILLED BY CHINESE

Reported They Were Killed When They Had Rebelled Against Authority

Hankow, China, Sept. 24 (AP)—Reports from central Kansu province today stated that Chinese had executed an appalling massacre of Moslems there, the victims numbering at least 3000.

Details were lacking, but it seems the Moslems rebelled against Chinese authority, whereupon they were slain.

According to reports, the executions were carried out under guise of a conference with the Moslems. The victims were separated from their wives and then put to death. According to the reports, the Moslems "died stoically."

It is indicated that the Chinese now fear Moslem retaliations, possibly causing renewed civil war which in 1918 caused the death of many thousands of Chinese and Moslems in Kansu.

Revolting "Ironsides" Takes 5000 Nationalists

Hankow, Sept. 24 (AP)—Badly battered, the steamer Kiangching arrived here today, bringing news of a disastrous blow suffered by the Nationalist Government forces at the hands of Gen. Chang Fah Kwei revolting "Ironsides" 4th Cantonese Division.

Three ships transporting Nationalist troops from Hankow were nearing Ichang when they were heavily shelled, more than 50 men being killed and hundreds wounded. Altogether 5000 Nationalist troops and considerable munitions were captured by the "Ironsides" troops. Two ships were captured and the third permitted to return to Hankow.

China Acts to Suppress Threat of Civil War

Shanghai, Sept. 24 (AP)—Chiang Kai Shek, president and commander-in-chief of the Chinese Nationalist government, with other military leaders at Nanking today continued strenuous efforts to suppress the threat of civil war in the Yangtze Valley, where clashes already have been reported.

China also is involved in new incidents with Japan and Russia in her northeastern provinces Japanese dispatches from Mukden described a serious conflict between Chinese police and Japanese railway guards of the South Manchurian Railway near Mukden in which three Japanese guards were wounded. A battalion of Japanese disarmed all police and arrested those responsible for the incident.

Soviet Russia threatens to adopt a policy of forceful action to settle the three-month dispute over administration of the Chinese Eastern Railway.

To the south in the heart of China, although Nanking authorities deny reports of civil war, President Chiang Kai Shek ordered a trusted division of troops into Nanking, while other troops, artillery and airplanes pressed on against the rebel general Chang Fah Kwei, commander of the "Ironsides" of the Fourth Chinese Division.

The president's immediate objective is to insure the safety of Canton, where it is said the rich commercial center is in an uproar at the prospect of another phase of Chinese civil strife.

PEACOX ON STAND IN FIGHT FOR LIFE TELLS OF WIFE'S LOVES

AGED MOTHER KISSES HIM IN COURT

White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 24—Earle P. Peacox took the witness stand in his own defence at 11:20 a. m. today at his trial for the murder of his "butterfly" bride, Dorothy, whom he strangled on their first wedding anniversary.

Earlier, Mrs. Catherine Peacox, his aged mother, took the stand in an effort to save him from the electric chair.

Peacox, a 22-year-old radio expert, was nattily attired in a black suit and black bow tie. His black hair was neatly slicked back. He sat forward in the witness stand, nervously gripping his hands, and his dark face wore its characteristic pout

SAVED HER LIFE.

"It was accidental," the defendant testified. "The pool was full of girls. One of them fell into the water and I pulled her out."

Q. (by defense attorney Sidney A. Syme)—And she was Dolly?

A.—Yes.

Peacox said Dorothy was his "first girl." He had not gone around with other girls.

The court sustained objections to a question as to whether he had gone with Dorothy to see a doctor in Yonkers before they were engaged.

Q.—When were you married?

A.—April 21, 1928. A week later we went to her mother's home to live.

Peacox spoke with a deep, low voice. He lost his nervousness under the suave, considerate questioning of his attorney.

Peacox told of a quarrel he had with Dorothy in July, last year. "Our natures were different," he explained. "I liked home and she liked to go to parties. Besides I was working many nights. So complications arose."

BUSSEY HIS RIVAL

Q.—What were those complications? A.—Once she came home late, about 4 a. m., and I told her I did not like it. She told me if I did not like it I could get out. What I wanted about it. She told me she was "tired of this make-believe marriage."

Q.—Had there been any other reason for your quarrel? A.—Yes, I told "Dolly" she was too intimate with Eugene Bussey. I knew she had written to Gene. I told her I objected to Gene saying in a letter it was all right for him to love her and for her to care for him "so long as I did not know about it".

Bussey is a former student of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore. He and Peacox had been close friends. He took Bussey to his home last June and introduced him to "Dolly".

Another young man, Roy Nelson, was also writing to "Dolly", Peacox said. He declared he told his wife to "stop writing" to Nelson.

When he and "Dolly" parted he went to New York and got a room. Later he wanted "Dolly" to become reconciled and for them to get an apartment and live alone. She did not want to. She was then living with her mother.

THEY QUARREL AGAIN

Q.—Had your feelings toward Dorothy changed in any way? A.—No, I still loved her.

Finally, a reconciliation was effected and he and "Dolly" went to live in Mount Vernon. Meanwhile he had been holding two radio positions, a night job and a day job.

They lived together only ten days, Peacox said. On Jan. 19 he found a note from her saying she was leaving for good. They had quarreled the night before.

Q.—Why had you quarreled? A.—She had come home at 2:30 a. m. I asked her where she had been. She said she had been to New York with her father. I told her I did not believe that. I talked to her but she said "don't bother me, I'm tired, I want to go to sleep."

Q.—And then what? A.—I told her I was very much disappointed in her, that I did not think she would go out that way. I quoted her the saying: "Caesar's wife should be above reproach."

Q.—What did she say to that? A.—She just laughed at me.

Next morning "Dolly" took his picture off the dresser, crumpled it up and threw it away. Then he tore her photograph in half.

During their quarrel Peacox had told "Dolly" he knew she had continued her correspondence with Bussey in spite of his protests. He revealed to her he had found the letters from Bussey in a waste basket which she had asked him to empty.

HE WANS BUSSEY

"I had telephoned Bussey in Baltimore and told him to stay away from my wife," the witness said.

He said "Dolly" slept on the floor that night.

"Where did you sleep?" Justice Arthur Tompkins interrupted.

"I didn't sleep at all," said Peacox. "I finally picked her up and put her to bed. I sat in a chair the rest of the night."

Court recessed for noon at this juncture.

Peacox had made a very good impression. He had told a coherent story. There was nothing defiant about him. On the contrary, there was an indefinable sadness in his low, vibrant voice.

Mrs. Peacox, a stolid, heavily-built woman of about 60, her gray hair showing beneath a black felt hat, had kissed her son when she came into court this morning and she regarded him affectionately through her spectacles as she took her place in the witness chair.

FATHER HURT HIM

"My husband always had a bad temper," Mrs. Peacox testified. "When Earle was seven years old he was sitting in my lap. He was an affectionate child. His father seized him and threw him across the room and against the door. I picked him up, took him outside, where he revived.

Mrs. Peacox was asked if Earle changed after this incident.

"Yes," she replied. "He had been very affectionate toward me, but he changed. He became very spunky. Whenever anyone would cross him he would fight back."

Earle was constantly tinkering with radio sets when he grew up, she said. Once he smashed his set to pieces in a rage. He even smashed the furniture.

"He had a bad temper," she repeated.

"HE ACTED CRAZY."

Mrs. ePacox related how she had visited the home of her son and daughter-in-law.

Q. (by defense attorney Sidney Syme)—How did she act toward Earle? A.—She was very grouchy toward him and I called her attention to it. She said, "Oh, I can't help it, he is always fixing the radio."

Q.—You said Earle always had a bad temper. Did he appear irrational at times. A.—I thought he was crazy at times.

130 KILLED IN MEXICO RIOTS

Mexico City, Sept. 24 (AP)—Dispatches to La Prensa from Jalapa, capital of the State of Vera Cruz, today reported that 130 persons had been killed and several hundred wounded in fighting connected with municipal elections throughout the state on Sunday.

The nephew of the presidential candidate, Ortiz Rubio, was said to have died in a riot in Vera Cruz City.

La Prensa's report said the worst disturbances were in Orizaba and Cordoba.

Puebla is an important manufacturing center with a population of 50,000, and is nationally renowned for progress and development. Cordoba is a place of 7000 inhabitants, sleepy and picturesque.

Examine Fruit Man's Books in Bank Fraud

While an investigation of the Hatch-Stevens Company, Inc., books was being made and police were seeking information in regard to J. Philip Hatch., alleged to have forged drafts on the Bank of Nova Scotia amounting to $120,000, involuntary petitions in bankruptcy against the company and one of its subsidiaries, were filed in federal court.

The Bank of Nova Scotia was the sole petitioner against the Hatch-Stevens Company. The institution set as a liability $59,374 in money loaned. The bank charges insolvency.

The bank is also one of three creditors petitioning against the Hatch Distributing Company, charging $63,408 liabilities. Miss Agnes M. Quinn, treasurer of the Hatch-Stevens Company, who is credited with discovered the loss, is another creditor.

She asks $22.50 in wages. The Beacon Fruit and Produce Company, as the third petitioner, charges liability of $330.

Frank H. Stevens, Hatch's partner in the fruit and produce brokerage firm, called a conference of the company's officials today. Miss A. M. Quinn was expected to throw some light on the affair.

Meanwhile, the search for Hatch continued through half a dozen cities. A warrant, charging him with larceny of $120,000, has been sworn out and will be served on Hatch as soon as he is located.

Leaving his wife prostrate in their home in South st., Brookline, Hatch, known to his associates as a lavish spender, has fled the city, police say, covering his trail behind him.

Capt. Ainsley C. Armstrong of the bureau of criminal investigation, who is handling the case, said today that any statements regarding the alleged fraud would have to come from officials of the company.

BANK HEAVY LOSER

Besides his connection with the Hatch-Stevens Co., Hatch was president of the J. P. Hatch Co. of Market Terminal and the Hatch Distributing Co. of the same address. He was a member of the Boston Athletic Association, the Kiwanis Club and the University Club. It is said that he also is a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company.

Stevens, seen at the Parker House, said:

"I arrived here Saturday from New Haven, on receipt of word that something was wrong in the office. Shortly after my arrival I found things had been badly handled here, and I would at that time have sworn out warrants if I had been able to get my hands on the evidence.

"I have also found that the shippers and those with whom we do business primarily have not been hurt to any serious degree. Only in two instances have our connections suffered The principal loser is the Bank of Nova Scotia, where Hatch discounted so many drafts, the amount of which I do not know."

Hatch is said to have drawn drafts on two of his companies with the Bank of Nova Scotia. One as the Hatch-Stevens Co., Inc., and the other is the Hatch Distributing Co., between which firms there is only the connection of Hatch himself.

Stevens has no connection with the distributing company, and believes that Hatch is sole owner.

Middlebury, Vt., Sept. 24—Middlebury College is mourning the death of Wilfred Davison, 41, professor American literature and dean of the Breadloaf School of English since 1921. Prof. Davison died in St. Johnsbury, following an operation for tonsilitis yesterday.

'Be Loyal to U. S., Remember Italy,' Duce Tell 400

Rome, Sept. 24 (AP)—"Be loyal and faithful citizens of the great republic," said Premier Mussolini to 400 American representatives of the Order of the Sons of Italy who gathered in the gardens of the Villa Torlonia today.

"The thought of the Fascist government on this subject always has been clear and precise.

"This does not mean that you should forget your Italian origin," continued the Duce. "On the contrary you should be proud of the thousand-year-old race to which you belong."

MORE HOPEFUL FOR HUGGINS

New York, Sept. 24 (AP)—Another blood transfusion, third since his illness, was given today to Miller Huggins, manager of the New York Yankees, who is critically ill at St. Vincent's hospital.

Dr. Edward A. King, attending physician, reported the little baseball veteran passed "a comfortable night" and that his temperature had dropped one degree, now being 104.

After a conversation with Dr. King, Edward Barrow, business manager of the Yankees, appeared somewhat more optimistic than yesterday, when it was feared Huggins would not survive.

"We are hopeful," said Barrow shortly after noon, "and so is Dr. King."

Vermonter Leaps to Death in Sea

Cherbourg, France, Sept. 24 (INS)—When the liner Berengaria docked today, her captain reported one passenger, George E. Kelly, 36, of Northfield, Vt., jumped overboard, Sept. 19.

No reason was ascertained for Kelly's apparent suicide. Passengers said he had appeared somewhat nervous during the early part of the trip but they had thought nothing of it.

Suspect's Wooden Leg Hides $300 Cash

Troy, N. Y., Sept. 24 (AP)—Lloyd Spence, 45-year-old dining room cashier of the steamboat Rensselaer of the Hudson River Night Line, was arrested here and $300 of $400 police said he stole from his boat was found in his wooden leg.

Spence, police said, had purchased a railroad ticket for Buffalo after addressing a note to his employers explaining he needed the money for a western trip and would return it to them when he could.

Berlin, Sept. 24 (AP)—A "German-English union" was founded here for the purpose of promoting German-English friendship.

The Earl of Reading will head the English branch and former Chancellor Cuno the German branch of the organization.

LINDBERGH TO MAKE 'CALLS'

Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, Sept. 24 (AP)—After a conquest of time, establishing a new air mail line and bringing the United States and this northeastern coast of South America 14 days closer, Charles A. Lindbergh rested here today. His return flight, which will include courtesy calls to several South and Central American countries, will begin tomorrow.

The Colonel arrived in Paramaribo yesterday, completing a 2595-mile journey since he and his party, which includes Mrs. Lindbergh, took the air at Miami Friday morning.

On the return flight Lindbergh plans to circle from Port of Spain over the western Caribbean country before returning to Miami October 10. Eight days will be spent resting at Cristobal, Canal Zone. The entire flight from the Florida city and return will embrace nearly 5000 miles.

DRIVER LOSES LICENSE

Registrar of Motor Vehicles George A. Parker today suspended the license of George McHatton of Harvard st., Chelsea, because "sufficient caution had not been taken by him to avoid possibility of an accident."

McHatton, Parker said, parked his car on a steep incline with emergency brakes set, but without the additional safeguard of crumping the front wheels against the curb.

"Owing, perhaps, to a defective ratchet, the brakes did not hold, the car speeding down the hill and crashing into and wrecking the rear porch of a house at 428 Washington ave.," the registrar said.

"This action is taken in the case of McHatton as a warning to all Massachusetts operators that they should not only set the emergency brake when parking on a hill, but should take the extra precaution of cramping the wheels against the curb whenever possible by putting the gears in mesh, or by doing both.

Rum Boat Seized With 10,800 Bottles

New York, Sept. 24 (AP)—The three-masted British schooner Vinnie is again in custody of the coast guard here after seizure with 10,800 bottles of liquor aboard, disguised as hams. She surrendered to a cutter off Montauk Point, where she had almost grounded in the mud.

Brought to New York, Skipper Michael Gillon was held in $10,000 and seven of his crew in $7500 each.

The Vinces had been seized once before by the coast guard and sold at public auction at Wilmington, Del. Gillon was indicted last March in a $1,000,000 liquor plot.

Takes Peggy Joyce a Minute to Dress

SINCLAIR SAYS: 'THANK YOU!'

Washington, Sept. 24 (INS)—From the district jail, where he is serving nine months for contempt of court and contempt of the Senate, Harry F. Sinclair sent out a personal message to stockholders in his oil company today, thanking them for their support of his policies and proclaiming his innocence of wrong-doing.

"As to my own fortunes," said this message, "I am confident that time will justify whatever I have done.

"My government drove a hard bargain with me over an oil lease on public lands and then accused me of attempting to defraud the government. I was promptly acquitted on this charge by a jury that had all the facts".

Quits Courtroom to 'Seek Wife'; Fails to Come Back

The trial of Joseph McKay of Marathon st., Arlington, on a charge of driving in a manner to endanger lives was about to begin in East Cambridge court today when the defendant arose suddenly from his seat and started from the courtroom.

"Where are you going?" Judge Stoned squired.

"I'm going after my wife," McKay answered, and kept on going.

Five, 10, 15 minutes passed and he did not return. In a half-hour another case was called. And at the conclusion of the session, when McKay was still missing, the case was continued until tomorrow.

TUFTS STAR IS ON HONEYMOON

When members of the Tufts College track team reported at the Tufts Oval for a workout today they were obliged to go through their workout without the services of Capt. Carl a Seaward.

The popular captain was otherwise engaged.

He was somewhere in New England on his honeymoon with his bride, Hechel Wilkey Seaward, whom he married at the First Universalist Church, in Wakefield, on Sept. 14.

The marriage was the culmination of a romance that has been carried on since Seaward came here from Los Angeles, Cal., to study at Tufts three years ago. Miss Seaward formerly lived in Wakefield.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Herbert B. Wilkey of Albion st., Melrose. Seaward is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. E. Seaward. The couple will make their home in Wakefield.

Legge Quizzed by Senate Committee

Washington, Sept. 24 (AP)—Chairman Legge of the Federal Farm Board today related his past connections with the farming industry and with the International Harvester Co. before the Senate Agriculture committee which began consideration of the nominations of board members.

Chairman Legge said he had served as head of the International Harvester Co. and prior to that had long been connected with agricultural pursuits principally livestock. He said he held a small fraction of one per cent of stock in the Harvester company.

Arabs in New Raid; Kill Jewish Guard

Jerusalem, Sept. 24 (INS)—Arabs attacked the children's village in the valley of Esdraelon during the night while the children were asleep, killed a Jewish guard and stole cattle. HIRED SHEARER FOR MERCHANT SHIP DRIVE

Newport News Corporation Loaned Him Money, Says an Official in Inquiry

Washington, Sept. 24 (INS)—William B. Shearer, who got $25,000 from American shipbuilders to attend the 1927 Geneva disarmament conference, was "broke" in 1928 and borrowed $2000 from the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Corp., Homer L. Ferguson, president, told the Senate navy sub-committee today.

The company holds three notes from Shearer, he said, two for $500 each payable to Vice-President F. P. Palen, and one to himself for $1000.

Shearer, he said, came to him in 1928 asking for employment. He wanted to come to Washington and said he "would look up the 15-cruiser fight," Ferugson said.

"I told him to stay away from Washington as far as we were concerned. We did not employ him."

Palen testified he was "more responsible than anyone else" for employment of Shearer as the $25,000 "observer and reporter" at Geneva.

He said that Shearer first had suggested he be sent to the naval parley. This, Palen explained, was after Shearer had conducted a merchant marine publicity campaign for shipbuilding companies in 1926 for a remuneration of $7500.

An investigation of all forms of lobbying in Washington will be sought at once by Senator Caraway (D.) of Arkansas, he announced today. Caraway has a bill pending that would authorize the investigation and compel registration of paid legislative representatives. The Senate has passed the measure, but it always has failed in the House.

RUNAWAY TEAM BANGS AUTO

A pair of frightened horses, dragging the front wheels of a broken dray behind them, dashed madly along Atlantic ave., today, causing injury to a woman and damage to several automobiles before they were checked by Traffic Officer Thomas Hurley after they had run into Pearl st.

John J. Stewart, 43, of West 2nd st., South Boston, the driver of the truck which left behind only a piece of machinery he was unloading from the dray dropped to the sidewalk suddenly collapsed. Then it as the front wheels broke away from the rest of the dray. He was not hurt badly.

The dray was being unloaded in front of 465 Atlantic ave., when the vehicle suddenly collapsed. The horses became frightened and bolted.

Before the driverless chariot had gone many yards it struck an automobile driven by Robert R. Miller of Shore drive, Winthrop. With him was a relative, Nana R. Miller, who received a severe shaking up. The running board and fenders of the car were badly damaged.

A few seconds later the team struck a parked car, hit a passenger bus and in Pearl st. struck another parked car, knocking off the running board and fenders.

At Pearl and Franklin sts. Officer Hurley seized the bridles and was dragged 20 feet before he brought the horses to a stop.

45 PERISH IN A SOVIET WRECK

Sverdlovsk, U. S. S. R., Sept. 24 (AP)—Forty-five persons were killed and 26 seriously injured in the derailing of a Moscow-Vladivostok local train today, six coaches jumping the track and overturning. Ten persons suffered minor injuries.

The accident took place 60 miles from Viatka. Two coaches were reduced to fragments.

First reports placed the number of dead at 30, but rescue parties further explored the wreckage the death list increased.

Chelsea Officer Returns to Duty

Patrolman Michael Whalen of the Chelsea police force, recently indefinitely suspended Sept. 7 on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer and intoxication, will return to duty Oct. 7.

Mayor Quigley announced today that Whalen had waived a hearing and has been given a 30-day suspension on the charges, retroactive to the date of his indefinite suspension.

Anti-Trapping Petition Filed

An initiative petition looking to the establishment of a law to punish by a fine of $50 any person setting, maintaining or using any trap or device for the capture of fur-bearing animals which causes suffering and not designed to kill, was today certified as being in proper form by Atty-Gen. Joseph E. Warner.

LEGION OFF FOR LOUISVILLE TODAY

Massachusetts' official delegation to the American Legion convention at Louisville, Ky., embarks on the Merchants & Miners' steamer Fairfax today ready to wage a stiff fight for Boston as the scene of next year's convention.

More than 1200 persons, it is estimated, are migrating from Massachusetts and the rest of New England this week to the convention, which starts next Monday, when the contest between Boston and Los Angeles will be decided by the votes of some 1100 delegates.

In the last month or two many states have in writing signified their intention of siding with New England in the contest. Noteworthy among those were Virginia, Delaware and Michigan.

The main Massachusetts party leaving today will be about 280 strong. That group will reach Louisville Sunday.

Leaders in the group will be State Commander O'Connell and Past State Commander William H. Griffin of South Boston, the latter the personal representative of Governor Allen.

Thursday evening out of the South Station will roll a special with about 150 aboard, mainly Massachusetts men and women, with a sprinkling from Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

Thursday, also, a special will bear a drum corps of about 40 out of Newport, N. H. And the Springfield Drum Corps, with other Western Massachusetts Legionnaires, will depart from Hampden County, over the Boston & Albany.

Friday, the Rhode Island and Connecticut special, with about 150 aboard, under the leadership of National Vice-Comdr. Edward L. White of New Haven, will head West and South.

Saturday is the Massachusetts musickers' day. Drum corps of about 60 each from Haverhill, Gardner and Fitchburg will roll out over the Boston & Maine. The Malden Drum Corps of 40 odd will go that night by the Eastern Steamship line to New York, thence West by train.

Ex-Commander William H. Griffin of the State Department, American Legion, was formally designated as Governor Allen's representative to the national convention in a letter addressed by the governor to Commander Paul V. McNutt at Louisville.

The governor's letter extends the invitation of the Commonwealth to the legion to hold its next annual convention in Boston, stating that there could be no more propitious time for the legion to convene here than at the time of the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the founding of Massachusetts Bay Colony.

The first delegates to the convention to arrive at Louisville came in six hours ahead of the national staff. They were five men from Massachusetts, headed by Dennis H. Haverty, State adjutant. Headquarters was established in a downtown hotel from which to conduct the campaign to take the 1930 meeting to Boston.

LEGION HEADS IN LOUISVLLE

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 24 (AP)—Headquarters for the eleventh annual convention next week of the American Legion were opened here today by James F. Barton, national adjutant, who arrived from Indianapolis with 29 Legion and Legion Auxiliary members.

Barton announced that membership in the national organization on August 1 has reached 782,117, an increase over last year of approximately 67,000. Rehabilitation of veterans who suffered ills as a result of their World War service will remain the chief objective of the Legion and will receive a major share of attention of the convention, he said.

Reports of the national rehabilitation committee will show, he said, that more than $4,000,000 in cash recoveries has been made this year for veterans and their dependents, in the form of disability compensation, government insurance, adjusted compensation and death claims.

Britain's Big New Airships Useless

London, Sept. 24 (AP)—Obsolete even before their trial flights, according to the Daily Mail, Great Britain's two new dirigibles, the R-100 and the R-101, are said to be failures from the point of view of the commercial pioneering for which they were intended.

Basing these charges on details given in the forthcoming number of a technical journal, the Engineer, the Daily Mail asserts neither ship will be fast enough or powerful enough for regular year-round flying over the North Atlantic route to Canada.

Rhode Island Bars 8 Bay State Drivers

Providence, Sept. 24—The State Board of Public Roads revoked the right of 13 out-of-state drivers to operate automobiles in Rhode Island, eight being from Massachusetts.

The following were among those penalized: Stephen J. Kogue, Wauregan, Conn.; Fred T. Mare, Worcester; Thomas I. Levesque, Fall River; Leonard A. Blake, Boston; Jeremiah Cahill, Fall River; Frank E. Halvorson, Fall River; John F. Kenney, Roslindale, Mass.; Edward Mullen, Fall River; John H. Marshall, Chestnut Hill, Mass.

More Names Added to List of Buds Who Are To Make Debuts This Season

WHILE SOCIETY MATRONS prepare town houses for the gay round of parties just ahead, the younger set hails with delight the announcement of several more buds who will have brilliant debuts this season. Miss Mary O. Porter, in charge of the debutante calendar, announces the following girls to be presented, together with the 145 names already published: Miss Mabel G. Bradley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Gardner Bradley, Arlington st., Boston; Miss Sylvia Grinnell, daughter of Mrs. Lawrence Grinnell of New Bedford; Miss Louise Knowles, daughter of Thomas C. Knowles of New Bedford; Miss Marion T. Little, daughter of Mrs. E. H. Little of Newburyport; Miss Alice B. Newell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Newell of Commonwealth ave.; Miss Carolyn Sheldon, daughter of Mrs. Charles Sheldon of Milton; and Miss Molly Spaulding, daughter of Mrs. Bartlett Harwood of Boston and New York.

MISS SPAULDING HAS JUST made her bow to Gotham society at a tea at the East Aurora, New York home of her mother, and will have her Boston debut early in November. Mrs. Harwood will have a Boston winter residence on Beacon Hill this year. Miss Alice Newell has just returned from a year in Europe, with her parents, and is scarcely settled in the Newell house on Commonwealth ave. before she is besieged with invitations to the many deb affairs. Miss Ellen Coolidge is returning from abroad to take charge of the Boston debut of Miss Elizabeth Boardman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Boardman (Anita Calif), of New York. Miss Coolidge will entertain with a tea dance at the Chilton Club for Miss Boardman early in November, following her coming out the last of October, at the Riverdale, N. Y., home of her parents.

MISS MARIAN EUSTIS WILL have charge of the group of 20 young girls who will pour at the lawn party to be given for Miss Hope Richardson by her grandmother, Mrs. Augustus Hemenway, at her Readville estate on next Friday afternoon. Miss Richardson returned from a trip abroad early in July. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Richardson of Brush Hill rd., Readville. On the same afternoon, Miss Edith Bullock daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chandler Bullock has her first deb affair at Worcester. Miss Bullock is to have other parties later in the season when she will be domiciled at the Hotel Sheraton, Boston.

MISS ADELAIDE BROWN, the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Brown of Boston and Cohasset, will have charge of the bevy of buds who will pour at the tea at which Miss Elizabeth Bird will be introduced on Saturday at the Cohasset Golf Club. Miss Barbara Proctor and Miss Rosamund ("Roddy") Holton will assist her. Miss Elizabeth Bird is the daughter of the Paul M. Birds. Another Elizabeth Bird, the attractive daughter of Reginald Bird of Commonwealth ave., Boston, will be presented later in the season at a brilliant ball. Elizabeth is a favorite name with the buds this year, with 16 of the season's group bearing it. There are two Elizabeth Jacksons among these.

WITH NEW PARTIES being announced every day, the foresighted hostess this season sends her invitations out early—if she would have a successful party. That reminds me that Mr. and Mrs. William H. Brown of Beacon st. and Cohasset are issuing invitations to a formal luncheon for a mixed company of 80 young people on October 20. The Cohasset home of the Browns will be en fete for this affair, as they do not return to town until November 1. The luncheon will be followed by a treasure hunt. Miss Newman, in whose honor it is given, is the daughter of Mrs. Frederick W. Eaton, recently returned from abroad. Mrs. Eaton has taken a house on Marlborough st. for the winter.

MISS ELIZABETH MORISON, who returned from Paris last week, is off for Bryn Mawr today. Miss Anna Walcott of Cambridge accompanies Miss Morison, and the two girls will share a dormitory room together. Miss Morison, daughter of Mrs. Horace Morison of Louisburg sq., has been studying music in Paris for the past year, while her mother has been a moving spirit in the work of the Christopher Shop. Mrs. Morison devoted her summer to running a branch of the Christopher Shop in Peterboro, N. H., near her summer residence. With her family she returned to Boston yesterday. Miss Sally Bowditch of Milton, who has been in Austria, returned to Boston only to pack for Baltimore and a medical course at the Johns Hopkins where she goes tomorrow.

MISS VIRGINIA COWLES, daughter of Mrs. Jaquith Cowles of Chestnut st., has returned from a six-week trip to Paris, where she met many of her contemporaries of the Junior League during her visit. Among them was Miss Betty Sherman, who is remaining abroad for study this winter. Miss Betty Soule, chairman of the committee in charge of the drive for funds for the new Junior League building, arrived on Chestnut Hill from Duxbury yesterday. Miss Constance Percival will soon join the group active in Junior League work, as the Percival summer home at Marblehead is to be closed on October 12.

Betty Alden

Miss Betty Pope is a member of the tennis team of the Beaver Country Day School. She has been on the North Shore all summer.

CLUBMAN IS ALL TANGLED UP IN ALIMONIES

Chicago, Sept. 24 (INS)—Gordon C. Thorne, wealthy clubman, is keeping two courts busy sifting his marital difficulties.

First, the millionaire clubman went before Superior Judge Charles Williams with a petition asking that his alimony to his first wife, Mrs. Virginia Milner Thorne, be reduced. She has filed suit for an order compelling him to continue paying of $750 a month.

Second, Mr. Thorne's former attorneys, of the firm of Gottlief, Schwartz, Markheim & O'Brien, who used to represent him in divorce cases (there were three), filed suit against him in the circuit court for $9,000 which they allege is due in fees and money advanced. In asking that his alimony to wife No. 1 be reduced, Mr. Thorne declared he was doing so for her own good. The alimony is causing her to lead a life of ease and pleasure that is bad for her, his petition said.

He also repeats the statement that his mother, Mrs. Katherine Thorne, has laid down the law against paying any more alimony to his ex-wives. His only source of income, he declares, is a $2,000,00 trust fund which has mother established for him.

Judge Williams set October 7 as the date for hearing his petition. That will probably be a busy day for Mr. Thorne as that is also the date when his third wife's alimony contempt suit is to be heard. She wants him put in jail for not paying $2000 due her for September.

VOTE AGAINST MILL STRIKE

Elizabethtown, Tenn., Sept. 24 (AP)—Officials of the American Glanzstoff and American Bemberg Textile Mills here announced today that their day and night shifts by an overwhelming majority had voted against striking.

The vote at the Glanzstoff plant was 1670 against and 128 for a strike. At the Bemberg plant, 886 voted against striking, and 68 voted to strike.

The vote was taken from the 11 p. m. to 7 a. m., and the 7 a. m. to 3 p. m. shifts this morning as one crowd left work and the other came on. Officials said the vote of the 3 p. m. to 11 p. m. shift would be taken this afternoon. There are 300 of these in the Bemberg plant and 400 in the Glanzstoff.

Children should wear High Shoes Part of Every Year

. . . As any fourth-grade Physiology will tell you, young bones are soft and quite susceptible to influence. And if allowed to become crooked, they'll harden crooked, unless something is done to straighten them.

Now every parent wants her child to have as perfectly formed a body as it's possible to have. And it's quite easy to see that proper bracing at the ankles is essential if the ankle bones are to grow strong and straight. So then, Coward recommends properly fitting high shoes to be worn at least part of every year.

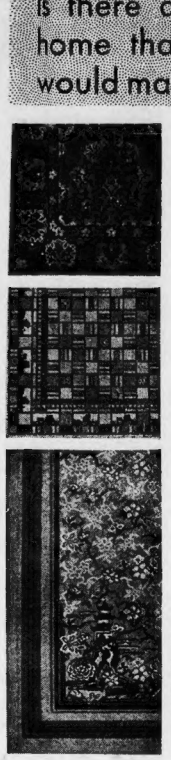
WEDNESDAY in WHITE'S THRIFT BASEMENT

Is there a bare floor in your home that one of these rugs would make neat and cheerful?

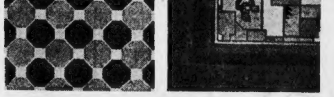


$8.48 for 9x12 Armstrong Quaker rugs (seconds)

$7.48 for 9x10 1-2 rugs
$5.48 for 7 1-2x9 rugs
$4.48 for 6x9 rugs
all Armstrong Quaker seconds

The five corners pictured are typical of the patterns in this group of felt base rugs—for these are new, in the latest Armstrong Quaker designs, famous for their attention to style and quality. They are seconds, having slight surface blemishes which will not affect wear.

There are patterns for kitchens, for sun porches, for bedrooms, for living rooms—and at our prices they are so inexpensive you might use them to brighten up your laundry or attic rooms. All in the original Armstrong Quaker wrappings.



$8.90 for misses' 3 piece covert ensembles

Every little detail of these covert ensembles reflects today's mode, simple tailoring that is entirely feminine in spirit; fullness in the skirt; a long puffy bow tie on the eggshell silk crepe blouse which is long so it may be worn outside of the skirt or tucked in.

Entirely fashionable, of covert cloth ordinarily found only in higher priced ensembles, your choice of green, brown, wine, navy, or oxford gray, in sizes 14 to 20—yet these are only $8.90.

$3.33 for men's all wool pullover sweaters

Cooler weather brings a real need for the protection of these wool sweaters. And a man feels consciously well dressed in them, because they are in the popular plain colors of jacquard patterns for which those leaders of man-fashions, the great golfers, show a decided preference. $3.33.

$3.33 for women's arch support shoes

Styled conservatively and attractively in black or brown kid with cuban heels, they give the necessary support without suggesting the appearance of the "arch-type" shoe, nor do they look so inexpensive as they are. $3.33.

$2.95 for samples of high grade shoes

3½, 4 or 4½ only

Manufacturers use these shoes to "show the trade" new styles. When they are through with the shoes, hardly a sign of use appears. Not many pairs alike, but all exceptional values, only $2.95.

27c a pair for boys' and girls' stockings

Because these are samples, they are priced far below what you would ordinarily pay for them. Boys' golf stockings, or long ribbed stockings and other styles for boys and girls, sizes 8, 8½ and 9, 27c.

55c for boys' shirts and blouses

To find durable, attractive materials, to have them tailored into good looking blouses and shirts that will give long service, to sell them at a price so low that their economy is instantly apparent—that is our purpose in these blouses and shirts for boys at 55c. That we have accomplished it will be plain to you when you see them.

Flag Champions See Sights of Paris

By FLOYD L. WILLIAMSON

Escort of the American Flag Champions Going Around the World as Guests of the Hearst Newspapers.

Paris, Sept. 24—The four champions of the United States Flag Association's flag contest arrived in Paris. The two boys and two girls were welcomed at Gare du Nord by Mme. Ganna Walska, who will be their hostess during their stay here.

She was accompanied by Mrs. Florence Carney. Mme. Walska presented each of the girls with beautiful bouquets from her garden. Before dinner the champions were taken on a drive through a number of Paris' historic spots.

Mme. Walska expressed herself as enthusiastic at her first impression of the four young Americans and said she was delighted to have them as her guests. She has planned an elaborate program for them, including visits to Versailles and Fontainbleu.

The champions came directly here from Brussels, where they had a delightful visit. At luncheon in Brussels they sat in the shadow of a famous battlefield of the World War. They heard Gen. Jackson, who commanded the 37th (Ohio) Division, tell some of the exploits of his soldiers.

The flag champions and Gen. Jackson were the guests of Maj. Edwin Watson, military attache of the American embassy, and Mrs. Watson, who is known to music lovers of America and Europe as Frances Nash, pianiste.

Gen. Jackson is in Belgium at the head of 200 members of the 37th Division, sent by the State of Ohio to dedicate a bridge near the spot where the Yankees repulsed the German troops in 1918. Gen. Jackson was a classmate at West Point of Col. James A. Moss, head of the United States Flag Association.

The boys and girls were enthralled as they heard the general tell of the hardships suffered and brave acts performed by his troops.

PLOT TO EXTORT CHARGED BY TUNNEY

Stamford, Conn., Sept. 24—Gene Tunney's answer to the $500,000 alienation of affections suit brought against him last July by John S. Fogarty of Fort Worth, Tex., was filed in superior court by Cummings and Lockwood, his counsel.

It consists of one paragraph of 18 words, in which Tunney denies the truth of the matters contained in Fogarty's complaint and then goes on to make a counter claim of $100,000 against Fogarty, in which Tunney charges that the Texan and his wife conspired to extort money from him.

The answer says: "The defendant denies the truth of the matters contained in the plaintiff's complaint."

Tunney and his bride, the former Miss Polly Lauder of Greenwich, are still in Italy at their place on the Isle of Brioni. It is not known when they will return, although it is presumed that they will be in this country if the suits brought by Fogarty and the latter's wife ever come to trial.

It is possible, however, that a deposition by Tunney may be presented. Meantime, Hiram S. Cummings, Tunney's counsel, who will try the cases in the event of a trial, is in Maine on his honeymoon and is not expected in Stamford until October 1.

Fogarty's counsel, Frank J. Martin of New Haven, must file a reply to Tunney's answer and to the counter claim before the case can go to trial.

As yet not reply has been filed to Tunney's answer to the $500,000 breach of promise suit brought last May by Mrs. Fogarty, former wife of John S. Fogarty. Frank L. Wilder of Bridgeport is her counsel.

GIRL FLYING TO DYING BROTHER

Salt Lake City, Utah, Sept. 24 (INS)—Winging its way eastward across the continent in a race with death, the record-holding plane bearing Miss Teresa Bartie, bound for Niagara Falls, was reported near here today.

Miss Bartie is racing to the bedside of her brother, who is reported dying. She received the reports of his illness while visiting in Montecito, Cal., and flew to Glendale, intending to board a passenger air liner for the East.

Arriving too late to make connections, she chartered Capt. Roscoe Turner's record-holding transcontinental airplane, which is capable of a 188-mile-an-hour speed.

Bible Expurgated for British Youth

London, Sept. 24—An expurgated copy of the Bible was issued today by the National Sunday School Union.

Among the changes of phrase the invitation to Joseph by Potiphar a wife is translated, "His master's wife cast her eyes upon Joseph and tempted him to do evil," and in the story of the prodigal son "evil companions" is substituted for "harlots." St. John's account of Christ's treatment of the woman taken in evil doing is omitted.

The Weather

For Boston and Vicinity—Fair tonight and Wednesday, not much change in temperature, gentle variable winds.

For Southern New England—Fair tonight and Wednesday, slightly warmer tonight in interior, gentle to moderate variable winds.

For Northern New England—Generally fair tonight and Wednesday, slightly warmer tonight except in Northern Maine, gentle winds mostly west.

For Eastern New York—Fair tonight and Wednesday except possibly showers in extreme northwest portion Wednesday, slightly warmer in the interior tonight, gentle to moderate northeast or east winds.

OCEAN FORECAST

Steamers departing today for European ports will have gentle variable winds becoming moderate westerly and fair weather to the Grand Banks.

MEXICAN FLIER FORCED DOWN

Mexico City, Sept. 24 (AP)—Col. Roberto Fierro, Mexican army ace missing since yesterday on an air race from Mexico City to Kansas City, turned up today at Apuco, State of Hidalgo. He was unhurt and had landed on account of the fog.

He gave few details of his mishap, which occurred 45 minutes after he left Valbuena. His report to the department of civil aviation ascribed his landing to bad weather and motor trouble.

King Albert Home After Trip to Rome

Brussels, Sept. 24 (AP)—King Albert of the Belgians returned to Brussels today after a 10 days' visit to Italy, where he met the royal family. It was expected some official statement would be issued soon regarding the reported betrothal of Princess Marie Jose of Belgium and Prince Humbert, Italian crown prince, which palace circles declare is not yet official.

47 COUNTRIES SIGN FOR U. S. TO JOIN COURT

Geneva, Sept. 24 (AP)—The number of signatories to the protocol for adhesion of the United States to the permanent world court at The Hague reached 47 today with announcement of the signature of representatives of Salvador, Paraguay and South Africa.

These three also signed the protocol for the revision of the world court statute, which now has been subscribed to by 45 nations.

Britain is ready to ratify the international convention for regulation of traffic in arms, Lord Robert Cecil announced to the assembly of the League.

Ratification, he added, probably would be accompanied by a condition that Great Britain's adhesion to the agreement would become effective only when other arms manufacturing countries subscribed to the same treaty.

Pressing on the Labor government's program for expediting the convening of a general disarmament conference, Lord Cecil again emphasized his conviction that limitation of land materials for war was the heart of the problem.

"Unless you limit land materials, you accomplish nothing for the cause of disarmament," he said.

The assembly's session centered on measures for the extirpation of war and the British delegation took occasion to commend the three measures to this end presented by the disarmament committee.

One concerned the progress of the preparatory disarmament commission's work toward a general conference, the second embodied proposals for giving financial aid to nations victims of aggression and the third advanced means for procuring the adoption of a model treaty to prevent war.

U. S. Chain Store Not Killing Retailers

Chicago, Sept. 24 (AP)—Holding that the chain store is here to stay, Dr. Julius Klein, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, told the National Chain Store Association today that the difficulties of independent retailers are due almost entirely to their own incompetence and not to competition.

"Repeated analyses of failures and near-failures among retailers in all parts of the country," he said, "bring out the fact that considerably less than five per cent of the failures among independents last year was due to competition. On the other hand, incompetence is responsible for anywhere from 32 to 80 per cent of the casualties in their ranks, dependent upon the locality and the trades involved."

Explaining that it is a commonplace of modern economic history that any sudden change in the functioning of industry or commerce has immediately brought about inevitable confusion and alarm, he said that today "one hears from many quarters the more or less panicky cry that the chain store must be, if not destroyed, at least drastically curtailed."

BLANCHE SWEET SEEKS DIVORCE

Los Angeles, Sept. 24 (AP)—Marshal A. Neilan, film director, thinks his estranged wife, Blanche Sweet, who has filed a divorce suit against him here, is "quite the finest woman I know."

This was Neilan's assertion when asked to comment on the case.

"I have nothing more to say than at the time we separated," Neilan said. "I think, as I said at that time, that she is quite the finest woman that I know, and that consequently her friends will respect her reason for seeking a divorce."

Neilan went out of his way, the complaint recited, to humiliate his wife before their guests and brought "objectionable people" to their home at 3 a. m.

20-CAR TRAIN RUNS AMUCK 5 MILES

St. Clair, Pa., Sept. 24 (AP)—Wreckage littered a five-mile stretch of the Pennsylvania railroad between here and Pottsville Junction today as a result of a wild dash down a steep grade of a runaway locomotive and 34 coal laden cars.

The train parted in three as it sped down the grade. Twenty-six of the cars were reduced to a mass of wreckage and a line of light and power poles were cut down, putting the town of St. Clair in darkness and causing a flooding of a coal mine by stopping the pumps.

Fireman H. H. Hawk crawled from his cab to set the hand brakes when the train split, leaving him stranded atop the second section of 20 cars. He was hurled from the train, rolled over an embankment and landed near the state highway, where he was picked up by passing motorists.

Engineer E. J. Gellner finally brought his engine and two of the cars that remained attached to it to a stop at Pottsville Junction.

An outgrowth of the accident was the serious injury of Mrs. Norman Hill of Middleport, whose automobile crashed into a telephone pole as it struck some of the widely scattered coal over the Frackville highway. She was taken to a hospital.

Where Is Cleopatra, or Is She Anywhere?

Paris, Sept. 24—Although an organized search is under way in Paris for the mummified remains of Cleopatra, it was admitted in official quarters today that there seems to be little hope of finding them.

There is much doubt that the mummy of the famous Egyptian Queen ever was brought to Paris as reported 10 days ago.

According to a report published here recently, Cleopatra "is lost somewhere in Paris."

It is claimed, and believed by many Egyptologists, that the sarcophagus containing the mummy of the "first lady of the Nile" was brought to France from Egypt by Napoleon after his Nile campaign.

It was suggested by students that Napoleon did not know that the sarcophagus contained the remains of the former world beauty queen, and that they were not identified as those of Cleopatra until 1830, when they were put upon exhibition at the French National Library.

In 1870 the supposed Cleopatra was hidden in the cellar of the vast library because war had broken out and the invading Germans were at the gates of Paris.

Years later a curator remembered where the mummy had been hidden, but he discovered that even a queen could not withstand the ravages of a damp cellar.

AN ANCIENT PREJUDICE HAS BEEN REMOVED

That ancient prejudice which hoarded gold with the fanatical zeal of the miser has vanished. Under the sheltering wing of AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE flourish thousands of banking institutions to which the individual safely entrusts his wealth.

"toasting did it"—

Gone is that ancient prejudice against cigarettes—Progress has been made. We removed the prejudice against cigarettes when we removed harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from the tobaccos.

YEARS ago, when cigarettes were made without the aid of modern science, there originated that ancient prejudice against all cigarettes. That criticism is no longer justified. LUCKY STRIKE, the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the choicest tobacco, properly aged and skillfully blended—"It's Toasted."

"TOASTING," the most modern step in cigarette manufacture, removes from LUCKY STRIKE harmful irritants which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way.

Everyone knows that heat purifies, and so "TOASTING"—LUCKY STRIKE'S extra secret process—removes harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from LUCKIES which in the old-fashioned manufacture of cigarettes cause throat irritation and coughing. Thus "TOASTING" has destroyed that ancient prejudice against cigarette smoking by men and by women.

No Throat Irritation—No Cough.

"It's Toasted"—the phrase that describes the extra "toasting" process applied in the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes. The finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—are scientifically subjected to penetrating heat at minimum, 260°—maximum, 300°, Fahrenheit. The exact, expert regulation of such high temperatures removes impurities. More than a slogan, "It's Toasted" is recognized by millions as the most modern step in cigarette manufacture.

G. O. P. Women Told of Merger Ills

"Tell your representatives in the State and Federal Government to be watchful of the purposes and effects of great mergers and the grasping of public utility companies by investment trusts and absentee ownership."

United States Congressman Charles L. Gifford of the 16th Congressional District so instructed the Republican women of Massachusetts at the opening luncheon of the club year.

One hundred and fifty workers for the political party crowded the assembly hall of the Women's Republican Club in Beacon st. to hear Congressman Gifford.

"When I see one group reach out and get control and sell out to another at fabulous profits and then watch that group do the same thing, then we go back to what we got as a Theodore Roosevelt inheritance—busting the trust," Congressman Gifford stated.

"The banks say they must merge, also other business enterprises. I begin to wonder where the poor man is going to get off. How is he going to be taken care of?"

To this end he stressed the need of co-operation by Massachusetts Republican women. They could serve in the solution of two problems, he said.

"Keep Massachusetts Republican and send a Republican senator to Washington at the next election," he urged.

Congressman Gifford stated that it was his belief the wet and dry question should be kept out of politics. But how, he didn't know.

"Is Massachusetts going to do like South Carolina, when she wouldn't pay the tariff?" he asked.

Congressman Gifford again spoke of an elected officer's duty to his district.

"Should a man vote according to his own dictates, or what his district orders him to do?" the speaker queried.

"The women have got to wake up. They have to do something in Massachusetts when voting on the Volstead referenda takes place."

Mrs. Nelson W. Howard, director of the club's political department, presided and introduced the speaker.

Mrs. Franklin W. Hobbs, president, welcomed the women to the club's opening. She urged them to take advantage of the splendid opportunities of the club.

Other guests and speakers included Mrs. Malcolm E. Nichols, Congressman Richard B. Wigglesworth, Mrs. H. Addington Bruce, Middlesex County chairman; Mrs. M. H. Gulleslan, director of music for the club; Mrs. Charles L. Gifford, Mrs. Thomas Boyd, Mrs. Joseph H. Soliday, Norfolk County chairman; Mrs. Julian Andrews of the Governor's Council; Mrs. Frank Ros Batchelder, vice-chairman Republican State Committee; Mrs. William S. Mitchell, Mrs. E. U. Willey, Mrs. Marion L. Higgins, Suffolk County chairman, and Mrs. William M. Butler, the club's first vice-president.

ALL BOSTON WOMEN'S DEMOCRATIC CLUB

The first public meeting takes place in Tremont Temple, Tuesday night, October 1, at 8 p. m. Mrs. Katherine A. Clark, president, will outline the year's program, and plans for an intensive campaign in which every woman will be asked to co-operate. New officers of the club are Miss Elizabeth M. Needham, Mrs. Margaret A. Delaney, Mrs. Abbie Galvin, vice-presidents; Mrs. Margaret Burke, treasurer; Mrs. Delia C. Callaghan, secretary.

BRAINTREE POINT WOMEN'S CLUB

Mrs. Harry M. Harmon, president of this group, will welcome Mrs. George E. Gomley, Second District Director, State Federation, tonight at the opening meeting of the club at 8 o'clock in the Welfare Club House. Mrs. Gomley is to be the principal speaker.

Mrs. Harmon's cabinet consists of Mrs. Clarence Cassidy, vice-president; Mrs. John Finker, secretary; Mrs. Robert Aydelott, treasurer; Mrs. Henry Phillips, auditor; Mrs. Frank Hopkins, custodian; Mrs. James Furse, Mrs. Victor Johnson and Mrs. F. Gordon Smith, directors.

BOSTON CITY FEDERATION.

Mrs. Carl Watson, president, will return from Europe the last of this month in time for the opening luncheon of the City Federation at the Hotel Statler, October 18. Officials of the city as well as prominent club women in the Hub will attend the initial function of the Federation.

MARSHFIELD WOMAN'S CLUB

Mrs. George Troy of Providence, R. I. will talk on "Modern Poetry" at the first meeting of the club year, October 4, at 2:30 p. m. in Rodgers Library Hall, Marshfield Hills. A musical program under Mrs. Ralph B. Rodgers' direction will be provided. Mrs. Herman Kent and Mrs. Julia Wentworth will be hostesses.

WOMAN'S GUILD

For the second time this season the Woman's Guild of St. Chrysostom's Church will meet tomorrow afternoon in the vestry of the church to further plan for the annual bazaar November 13, at the parish house. Mrs. Rupert Ganse, who will preside at tomorrow's session, will also head the bazaar as general chairman by virtue of her presidency of the group.

On October 9, members will sew on articles for the bazaar that are to be sold. Mrs. Richard Watts will be hostess on this occasion. Mrs. Herbert Price will supervise the tea tomorrow.

HEBREW LADIES' AUXILIARY

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Hebrew Educational Alliance will begin their year of activity tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at the Alliance Building. The meeting will be featured by an address by Louis Hurwich, superintendent of the Bureau of Jewish Education. The perpetuation of traditional Judaism and the maintenance of Jewish learning are the aims of this organization. Mrs. J. Greenberg will be hostess.

MASSACHUSETTS DIETETIO ASSOCIATION

The first meeting of this group will be held tonight at the Women's Republican Club, 46 Beacon st., at 8 o'clock. Miss Frances Stern of the Boston Dispensary Food Clinic, who has spent the past few months in Europe making a survey of the clinics, will discuss "A Comparison of European Clinics With Those in the United States."

BREECHES BUOY SAVES 21

Elizabeth City, N. C., Sept. 24—The crew of the Swedish steamer Carl Jerhald, which stranded a half-mile north of Kill Devil Hill Coast Guard station, North Carolina, was rescued by breeches buoy. The 21 men and one woman aboard were brought ashore in the face of heavy seas.

The steamer which stranded about 300 yards off shore broke in two just a few minutes after the rescue was completed.

The Gerhard, according to information received over the government sea-coast wires, had been partly disabled before she struck the beach. She had been battling a northeast gale since last Friday with a faulty steering gear.

Good Refrigeration Demands Moist Cold

Cold alone does not keep food fresh. There must be some moisture in the cold air—the moisture that is found only in an ICE refrigerator. This moisture is provided by the slowly melting ICE and is picked up by the air, which circulates constantly throughout the refrigerator.

To get full value from your food, to keep your fruit and vegetables fresh and juicy, and to retain the flavor of meats, keep the ice compartment of your refrigerator two-thirds full of sparkling Boston ice.

PROTEST FOOD SERVED ABOARD SCHOOLSHIP

Complaints of the crew of the Massachusetts nautical training ship Nantucket about food served them on a cruise from Bermuda to Provincetown, may lead to an investigation.

The Nantucket is due in Boston Sunday and 24 of the 214 cadets aboard are scheduled to be graduated October 5.

Capt. Armistead Rust of the Nantucket admitted on arrival at Provincetown, that a delegation of the crew had protested to him regarding the food while en route from Bermuda.

While several cadets verified this story and told of other alleged instances of poor food or of insufficient food, they refused to be quoted by name, claiming they might not be graduated if their identities became known. A father of one of the boys, however, said it was common talk that the food was "poor" on the ship.

Capt. Rust admitted that he had heard reports that the cadets were disgruntled at the food on the Bermuda passage. He said that one day he ate the same food as the cadets at each of the three meals.

The cadets claimed their "chow" allowance is only 35 cents per meal. The 16 regular members of the crew and the seven petty officers eat from the same bill of fare as the cadets.

Capt. Rust said the food he ate that day, which was furnished the crew and the cadets, was all "good food." As for the crew and cadets not getting enough food, the captain labeled such talk as "absurd."

"The truth is that there are a few trouble-makers on board," the captain said. "The boys wanted 'tid-bits.' Instead if finding fault with the food, they ought to be enthusiastic over the cruise through the Mediterranean we have just had. When I was at Annapolis in training, I didn't get as good food as the cadets have on this ship."

Capt. Rust, who is completing his 20th voyage on the Nantucket, which was given to the Commonwealth by the Navy Department and is run by a board of commissioners under the sponsorship of the State Department of Education, admitted that four seamen and a fireman protested to him about some beans on the passage from Bermuda to Provincetown.

Fills Pole Holes Fast as Company Digs Them

Groton, Sept. 24—Amid a thick silence, a grim battle is being waged here between the municipal light board and one Shadrach Evans, a resident of Chicopee row. According to a bill in equity filed by three members of the board, the lighting company is busily digging holes on Chicopee row, and Shadrach is as busily filling them up.

This much—the fact that there is a battle—is contained in the bill in equity, signed by Arthur A. Wood, Harold N. Sargent and Fred Coburn, asking the Middlesex Superior Court to prevent Evans from filling the holes which are being dug to hold stays and guy wires.

The light poles in Chicopee row are being changed for higher ones and the guy wires are necessary, the lighting company says.

Questions about the affair were answered in whispers, when they were answered at all. The signers of the bill in equity refused to talk. Residents of Chicopee row refused to talk. Officials of the lighting company refused to talk.

And Shadrach was silent. Poles there have always been on Chicopee row since Groton took to using electric lights. But guy wires are something new and although they do not obstruct the view,

FIGHT LOSES HOSPITAL TO MARBLEHEAD

A $300,000 hospital was lost to the town of Marblehead when, after sitting through two hours of wrangling at a special town meeting, William J. Goldthwaite of Marblehead, together with his brother, Dr. Joel Goldthwaite of Boston, settled the controversy by withdrawing their offer of Devereaux Mansion as a gift to the town.

Devereaux Mansion, a private sanatorium, operated by the Goldthwaite brothers, was offered to Marblehead June 1.

At that time a finance committee was appointed to estimate the cost of equipping the establishment to accommodate the needs of the town. The meeting was for the purpose of accepting the report of the committee at a cost of $33,000.

After speeches by various members of the town, William E. Smith of Marblehead, and a teacher at Boston English high school, moved that the matter be postponed for two weeks. At this juncture Goldthwaite withdrew the offer.

He told the town meeting members that since the offer had been made the finance committee had had ample time to estimate a complete report.

Devereaux Mansion is situated in the most exclusive residential section of the town. Included in the offer of the $300,000 sanatorium was all equipment and three acres of land.

JORDAN MARSH STORE OFFERS STYLE SHOW

Jordan's Fashion Esplanade opened this week. On the second floor of their main store is a miniature style world, in which the newest creations of American designers and latest importations from Europe are featured. Ensembles complete with accessories are arranged in six groups, four costumes in each group. Included are costumes for town and traveling, for sports wear, daytime wear, and formal afternoon and evening functions.

Responsibility for the Fashion Esplanade rests with the Jordan Fashion Bureau—a unique service in department store merchandising. Every item of the costume from millinery to footwear is chosen in harmonious relationship—even to such secondary details as jewelry, gloves and handkerchiefs.

For the benefit of visitors to the Fashion Esplanade, the Jordan Marsh stylists give the following expert fashion advice. Beginning with sport wear, the fashion highlight is a new graceful mode.

SKIRT LENGTHENED

The silhouette is at least three inches below the bend of the knee. The tuck-in silhouette, the modified princess line, the hip length cardigan, the two-three and three-four length coat line, the easy raglan sleeve line, the swagger coat flare from shoulder to hem, the shoulder cape, and cape-coat, the yoked and flared skirt are the leading features of the new sports silhouette.

Tweed is well in the lead for dresses and ensembles for sport wear. Jerseys are vastly important in their Rodier stripes, tweed patterns, lace weaves and flecks. For blouses, light weight wools and jerseys predominate. Silk crepe and satins are extremely smart with tweed and jersey suits.

The sport furs are swagger raccoon, staple muskrat, versatile kapin and very new is the jaunty fashion of the fur jacket.

SHOE COMBINATIONS.

Hats for sport are brow exposing, face framing, head fitting silhouette. Shoes are oxfords and pumps, two-strap in lizard and calf or in leather combinations. Bags are top strapped and frameless to match shoes, in leather and color, or of fabrics to harmonize with the costume. The gloves are chamois, six-button washable doe, slip-on, or washable suede slip on. Chiffon lisle, clocked, is the popular stocking.

The fashion highlights for town, travel and general daytime wear is considered in terms of a new practical mode, youthfully dignified, feminine, sophisticated and are always "ensembled." The silhouette is again at least four inches below the bend of the knee.

The Jordan Marsh stylists believe that "the sport theme" will be stronger than ever and will invade the business offices. Women, they think, will have two distinct sets of daytime clothes complete in every detail.

The establishment of one-way traffic regulations on Boylston st., Newton, along its entire length, from Brookline to Wellesley, is contemplated by the Board of Aldermen, and a public hearing on the matter will be held soon.

Germany to Fight for Her Coal Mines

Heidelberg, Ger., Sept. 24 (AP)—Germany is preparing a strong fight for retention of the Saar mining properties at the coming Paris negotiations on the fate of that territory.

Preliminary conversations here among delegations of the Reich, Prussia, Bavaria and representatives of Saar business interests resulted in unanimity that no proposition for an earlier settlement should be entertained unless it insured complete reunion with Germany.

Three Appeal Fines in Hunting Cases

Three Boston men were fined in Chelsea court today on charges of unlawful hunting on the Revere marshes on September 14. William Cawyer, Bay State rd., Boston, and Samuel Kolow, Talbot ave., Dorchester, were fined $20 each on charges of unlawful hunting, while Dr. Morris A. Cohen, Commonwealth ave., Boston, was fined a similar amount, for alleged unlawful killing of a bird. All appealed.

FRANCE, ITALY, JAPAN TO WIN NAVAL PLEA

Washington, Sept. 24 (AP)—Any naval limitation agreement reached at the projected London conference of the five leading naval powers very probably will accord to Japan, France and Italy a greater ratio with respect to the United States and Great Britain of at least some of the auxiliary craft than now exists with respect to capital ships and airplane carriers.

Whether this increase in ratio will apply to large type cruisers is a question, but J . n is expected to ask for an increase in its ratio of all types of cruisers. This would give it a strength in this category of 70 per cent of the British and American totals, compared to the 60 per cent now applying to capital ships.

France and Italy are expected to obtain a considerable increase in ratio for destroyers and submarines, since these types are regarded as their greatest defense weapons in view of the small size of the fleets of capital ships they agreed to accept at the Washington conference.

The question of parity between France and Italy is expected to provide one of the hurdles for the conference at London, but since these nations accepted parity on capital ships and airplane carriers at the Washington conference, some observers here are inclined to the view that they will eventually reach an accord as to their relative strength in cruisers, destroyers and submarines.

Jailed on Liquor Charge

Lawrence, Sept. 24—In superior criminal court Michael Nekrish of Lynn, charged with illegally selling and illegally keeping liquor, was sentenced to serve six months in jail and was fined $400. He had a record, the police said.

SAM HILDRETH, TRAINER FOR SINCLAIR, DIES

New York, Sept. 24 (AP)—Sam Hildreth, 68, trainer for Harry F. Sinclair's Rancocas stable, died today in Fifth ave. hospital.

Hildreth had been ill for nearly a year, but his condition did not become serious until last week. On Friday he was taken to the hospital from his home near Jobstown, N. J. Yesterday he underwent an abdominal operation, but he failed to rally. The end came at 7:55 o'clock this morning.

"Uncle Sam," as the 68-year-old turf veteran was familiarly known about the track, was connected with conditioning race horses of one kind of another since his childhood days. First it was broncho horses out west that attracted the riding skill of young Hildreth. Then he took up riding on the half-mile tracks of the far west, developing into a sensational jockey. With the money of Harry F. Sinclair he built up a stable that swept through American turf, year after year. But last season an epidemic that took its toll of the Rancocas stable's horses combined with the veteran trainer forced Hildreth down the list of leading money winners among trainers for the first time in several years.

Zev probably was the best horse ever developed by Hildreth. This star of six years ago won $272,008 to become the leading money winning horse of American turf.

He also trained Mad Hatter, Priscillian, Stromboli, Bud Lerner, King James, Sublet, Nedana, Grey Lag, Uncle, Silver Fox, Kai Sang, Mad Play, Nassauk, Ariel, Hourless and the famous McChesney, owned by E. E. Smathers, and the good mare Wilful.

This year the stars of the stable are a pair of juveniles—Grattan and Mokatan.

A year ago Hildreth's friends said he would never saddle another horse, but he returned at the start of the current season apparently as well as ever and started off with phenomenal success at the opening of the Metropolitan season.

CREEPY FILM SCORES AT STATE

Photoplay..."The Unholy Night"
Type .....Mystery Drama
Stars..Roland Young, Ernest Torrence, Dorothy Sebastian, Theater .....Loew's State

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Roland Young

You get it by the eyeful and earful. Good acting, with some good dialogue and a rattling good mystery "thriller" combine to furnish tip top entertainment. For those who delight in creepy melodrama, this picture has about everything. It stands out as one of the best of the talkies of this type to date. It gets a good strong grip and holds it to the finish. Its clutch is better than that of a good many fliv-vers. It is like the strangle-hold the Old Man of the Sea got on Sinbad the Sailor. The weirdness just oozes and drips all over your mentality. Those given to puzzling their noodles trying to guess the identity of the killer will have a "rough time" of it here. Adventure does lurk right around the corner, but the experts have so shrouded their villain well in this production. You'll get plenty of adventure long before you catch up with the slayer, or even suspect who he may be.

THE London fog thrown on the screen is a pretty good forecast of the depth of the entanglements in this tale. The story is Ben Hecht's "The Decond Regiment," the title giving easy idea of the number of murders that may be expected. It is a labyrinthine thread of action that ensues. Shirred eggs are simple compared to the twists and turns it takes.

THOUGH rather slow in getting down to business at the beginning, the picture swings rapidly on, once it has gotten its stride. The detectives seeking the strangler of officers of the "Fourth Rutland Regiment," are led a merry chase in truth. An old will with a queer angle is brought in, and with it the woman in the case. Magic and mysticism are called on, to the end that there be a great climax in the staging of a ghost trap to reveal the murderer.

OF the actors the best is Roland Young, though Ernest Torrence is as usual most capable. Dorothy Sebastian gives her finest as the Lady Efra. Other clever participants in the action are John Miljan, Noah Beery, Phillip Strange, Polly Moran and John Loder.

* * *

ON the stage there is a splendid show. Anatole Friedland and his "Night Club Revue." Principals and their aides are superb. Various screen shorts fill out the unusually good program.

Out to Bottle Up His Foes

RICHARD BENNETT

HAVING BEEN through the mill himself, Jargegan, which is the role Mr. Bennett has in the play of that name at the Wilbur, knows how to deal with enemies of himself and his friends. He'll use the bottle on their heads.

ORIGINALITY AT HOWARD

WITH Lillian Dixon, "Cheri," as a dancing specialist, and others, there is a burlesque show at the Old Howard this week that bubbles with originality. Of course it is the girl contingent in which the audience is largely interested, and they will measure up to the prettiest in burlesque-land. The entire show won the plaudits of the entire house yesterday.

Lillian Dixon demonstrated her ability along various lines and was a genuine favorite. "Cheri," as one of the most attractive of dancing stars, was given an ovation when she executed her acrobatic steps. Comedy is also essential to every burlesque show, and Fred Bosch was much to the front, sharing honors with Phil Hart. Claire Devine was another clever performer.

In the continuous part of the bill are seen the Six American Belfords, a casting and gymnastic act; Levan and Bolles in a humorous act, and Montana, the cowboy banjoist.

Pathe Film in Work

Production is under way at the Pathe studio on "This Thing Called Love," from the stage play by Edwin Burke. Edmund Lowe and Constance Bennett have the leads, and ZaSu Pitts, Roscoe Karns, Carmelita Geraghty, John Roach and Stewart Irwin are in the cast. Paul Stein is directing and Ralph Block is the producer.

Week's New Plays

SHUBERT - APOLLO — "The Black Crook," an extravaganza of the good old days. Revival of the most sensational musical entertainment of the mid-Victorian period, when legs were first boldly exhibited on the stage. To be reviewed later.

SHUBERT—Four Marx Brothers in "Animal Crackers." Musical farce, with the talented Marx boys doing their familiar stuff and giving considerable satisfaction. It's a laugh show. To be reviewed later.

PLYMOUTH—Fay Bainter in "Jealousy." The story of young lovers who are lost through their own mistdeeds. Miss Bainter and Melvyn Douglas make up the entire cast. To be reviewed later.

Continuing Shows

TREMONT—"Hollywood Revue." All talking musical and feature film, introducing screenland's most important stars.

MAJESTIC—"Follow Thru." a musical play. The story is about golf, but the big items are melodies and dances.

WILBUR—Richard Bennett in "Jarnegan." Presenting the inside of the Hollywood studios during business hours. Last days.

"Blind Raftery"

"Blind Raftery," the late Donn Byrne's Irish romance, will come to the talking screen as a United Artists production with Lupe Velez and Donald Novis. George Fitzmaurice will direct. Fitzmaurice has just completed "The Locked Door," with Rod LaRocque, Barbara Stanwyck, William Boyd, Betty Bronson and Za Su Pitts.

Gets Christie Post

Charley Grapewin has been named adaptor and dialoguer of talking pictures for Christie to fill the post left vacant by the resignation of Alfred A. Cohn, who has joined Warners.

"Loose Ankles"

Here and There

GLOBE—"The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" and "New Orleans" for four days; starting Thursday, "Thunder," with Lon Chaney, and "Should a Girl Marry."

BOWDOIN—"Our Modern Maidens," "The Girl in the Glass Cage" and the comedy, "Men O'War."

B. U. PUPILS TO GREET FARRELL

STUDENTS from Boston University will honor one of their fellow students tonight when more than 800 B. U. pupils will attend the Keith-Albee, where Charlie Farrell will make a personal appearance at 9 o'clock for their special benefit. It was during the years between 1920 and 1922 that Charlie Farrell poured over numerous books as a B. U. student. Today that same young man is numbered among the outstanding movie stars of the past decade.

His instantaneous success in the William Fox productions, "Street Angel" and "Seventh Heaven" and in "Lucky Star" places him among the 10 foremost stars of the cinema world. Paired with Janet Gaynor, young Farrell rose to the heights and in his present vehicle, "Lucky Star," which is showing at the Keith-Albee, he proved the wisdom of General Manager Winfield R. Sheehan in selecting him for another star role in a forthcoming production called "Sunny-side Up," in which Miss Gaynor also plays opposite this handsome "boy" from Onset.

As a special favor to his former fellow students at B. U., Mr. Farrell tonight will sing for them "The Vagabond Lover" and also show his versatility by playing the song on the cornet.

Young Farrell entertained at a luncheon at the Copley-Plaza where he proved his versatility. For one thing he is a mighty good vocalist, so now the public will know when his song films come along, that he did not have to employ a "ghost singer." He also proved a felicitous talker. On behalf of Mayor Nichols, who is ill, George W. Johnson welcomed the star to the city. Word was also given on behalf of the Cape Cod section of Mr. Farrell's being the idol of all hearts in that district, young and old alike.

The star's father, owner of a motion picture theater at Onset, motoring to Boston to see his son, had a narrow escape from serious injury, in Stoughton. When his machine was smashed by another, he was badly bruised and for a time it was thought a rib had been fractured. But he gamely came on to meet his boy.

"On with the show" is the spirit that rules Charles Farrell's being. Not to make this stage appearance at 3 p. m., yesterday, he had reached Washington and Stuart sts., in a taxi at 2:57 when the traffic officer halted all traffic. Not to be outdone, Charlie leaped from the taxi and hotfooted it to the Keith-Albee, and made his appearance on time.

Youman's Musical Show at Colonial

Vincent Youman' new musical production, "Great Day," will remain at the Colonial for an extra week, and will continue at that theater till October 5, after which the production will make its debut at the Cosmopolitan Theater, Columbus Circle, New York, about October 7. The big cast, which includes Mayo Methot, Walter C. Kelly (The Virginia Judge), and Maude Eburne, 60 Jubilee Singers, the stirring music of Vincent Youmans have caught the fancy of Boston theatergoers.

MOVIE CLOCK

ORPHEUM—"Speedway"; p. m., 12:15, 3:15, 6:15, 9:15.

MODERN AND BEACON—"Charming Sinners"; a. m., 10:41; p. m., 1:36, 4:11, 6:56, 9:41.

SPEED FILM AT ORPHEUM

WILLIAM HAINES turns to thrills and romance in "Speedway," drama of the auto race track, now on view at Loew's Orpheum. In addition, Haines manages to inject many laughs into the picture. He appears as a wise-cracking young racing mechanic, who eventually wins his place as a racing driver, only to sacrifice it on the altar of friendship.

Anita Page

Anita Page, Ernest Torrence, Polly Moran and Karl Dane are seen to advantage in supporting parts.

Twenty-two performers whose average weight is less than 60 pounds and most of whom are less than three feet in height provide the feature entertainment on the Orpheum stage. They are members of the internationally famous troupe known as Singer's Midgets.

Besides, Carroll and Mann in a hilarious skit entitled "Interruptions," and La Fleur and Portia, daring equilibrists, are other worthy attractions. Laurel and Hardy in their newest all-talking comedy is an added screen treat.

GOSSIP ALONG NEW YORK'S RIALTO

FOR some time past the theater's spectators have been sitting uneasily. The occupant of any seat within a stone's toss of the stage has become accustomed to regard his nearest neighbor with suspicion. For these self-same nearest neighbors, in the last season or two and with disconcerting frequency, have been no more than actors disguised as audiences, ready on the slightest provocation to rise in their seats and start shooting, or whatever the author's directions demanded for the occasion.

Now, thanks to, or blame upon, William Griffith, that suspicion will have to be directed to all parts of the theater.

Mr. Griffith has appointed himself an emissary of good will from the stage to the audience and intends to join the two irrevocably, in his new revue, "On and Off," which will be seen later this season.

When he was with "The Garrick Gaieties" of a few seasons past, Griffith wrote a series of sketches to be played in any and all parts of the house. They weren't played that way at all, at first tried out. But they are going to be in this new show.

There will be a platform that will swing out from the stage, capable of dropping a whole chorus in the laps of tired business men in the eighth row. Or a skit may slide off into a side aisle.

To have songs sung here and dances danced there, Mr. Griffith is importing a couple of Swedish German artists, who will help devise the dance numbers for the production.

When they have finished that task, perhaps Mr. Griffith will set them to work at finding some means of putting like elasticity into the necks of prospective auditors.

There were further additions to the cast of "The House of Fear" over the week-end. This is the mystery and farce piece which is expected to make a Broadway bow in the nearer half of October. Gordon Wescott, Harry Worth, Frank Thomas and Maury Tuckerman are the new members of the company, joining in the bonds of Equity Effie Shannon, Cecil Spooner and Clay Clement.

"The Rogue's Song"

Marion Schilling has been added to the M-G-M cast of "The Rogue's Song" which Lionel Barrymore is directing.

"Darling"

VILMA JOZSY

VILMA is one of the "Dimpled Darlings" at the Gayety. Her name intimates that she is a jazzy gal.

5-HOUR SHOW AT WALDRON'S

"SPORTY WIDOWS," a new Mutual burlesque show; two feature all-talking photoplays and several vaudeville acts make up the five-hour show at Waldron's. The burlesque show is high-powered all the way through. Vic Plant and Flossie De Vere head the long list of stars. Vic Plant's comedy was uproarious. It was true burlesque and nothing else.

Irene Stanley

caped his notice, for he poked fun at everything and everybody.

Flossie De Vere's charms were many. She not only led the peppy chorus through their presentations, but proved that she could sing and dance as well. Irene Stanley is one of the stars.

BURLESQUE PEPPY AT GAYETY

A BURLESQUE show with a plot, a series of colorful scenes, comical stories, speedy dances, and one of the funniest female impersonators burlesque has produced—all these and more in "Dimpled Darlings" at the Gayety.

281-pound eccentric comedian presented the female impersonation skit—and the audience roared with laughter. Every trick ever used by leading female impersonators was the subject of much fun. The costumes used by "Happy" Hyatt during that number were both rich and ridiculous.

Bert Carr, chief comedian of the show was Hyatt's foil, and between the two there was something worth seeing. There was a plot, too, but that vanished when songs, dances, protean bits, or something else demanded the stage. One of the stars is Vilma Jozsy.

Abe Sherr danced—and his feet twinkled. Al Golden, producer, impersonated a "dope fiend" in vivid manner and the snappy chorus kept busy every minute.

WOMAN IN RACE FOR COUNCIL

Seeking to upset city tradition that has ruled no woman shall hold office in the Waltham city council, Mrs. Anna W. Fogg, widowed mother of two grown sons, has entered the race for the office of councillor-at-large.

Four years ago she was defeated as a candidate for the same office by the narrowest of margins. For four vacancies she finished fifth out of eight candidates.

This year she has the backing of many women's organizations, whose strength, she believes, will result in her victory.

Unlike most women candidates she is not seeking any reforms.

"My purpose in running? Why, merely the fact that I believe the women of this city should have an active voice in the administration of city affairs.

NOT SEEKING REFORMS

"Women pay taxes and women vote. Why should they not also take an active part in running the city government here as they do in many other communities. Of course, the percentage of women office-holders everywhere has been small, but this is bound in increase as the interest that women take in politics grows.

"I want to make it clear that I am not out to make any reforms. I realize that although I have always taken a keen interest in city affairs, I have a great deal to learn in that respect. If I am elected, I plan to mark time until I have gathered experience in the work.

PROSPECTS BRIGHT

"Offhand, I do not know of any particular changes that I would advocate. It is my opinion that this city has been comparatively well governed in recent years.

"As for my chances of winning, the prospects seem very bright at present. Those who are supporting me in this contest are planning to carry on an intensive campaign to bring out the women's vote on election day."

Four councillor-at-large seats are to be filled at the city election in November.

Mrs. Fogg is secretary of the Republican city committee and is a member of the Women's Republican Club of Waltham. She resides at 94 Summer st., which has been her family homestead for many years.

$40,000 Feet

Mae Moran of Lynn thinks well of her feet. She should, for she earns her living with them. She is a shoe model. Her employers think so well of them they have insured them for $40,000, that is $20,000 per foot. (Staff photo.)

VALUES FEET AT $400 A TOE

Next time some careless boy friend takes Miss Mae Moran, Lynn shoe model, to a dance and steps on her toes—it's going to cost someone a lot of money.

Mae's cute little tootsy-wootsies were today insured for $40,000 against all and sundry mischance.

The insurance policy was taken out when Miss Moran's employers, Nichol & Taylor, last makers, learned that the young woman had bought herself an automobile.

"We can't have you taking chances, Mae, with the most perfect pair of 4B feet in the world," said the boss, big-heartedly.

So the feet were injured, and Miss Moran should worry about motor crashes, clumsy partners, corns and hoof and mouth disease. Al Ishe's responsible for now is her neck. And she's thinking of insuring that

TRAP 2 AFTER 6 BREAK JAIL

Rockford, Ill., Sept. 24—Four prisoners are at large today after a daring delivery from the Winnebago County jail here, in which six of the inmates slugged a turnkey unconscious and fled. Two of the convicts were recaptured shortly afterward.

Among the men still at large is Kenneth Grimes, 19, wanted in several states for robbery. The others are James McCarthy, 20; Jack Sharma, 19 and Kenneth Green, all convicted of robbery.

The two men captured are Orin Fletcher, 27, convicted of [illegible] and John Nedobinski, 20, [illegible] conspiracy to rob a bank.

The turnkey Christy Fields was injured unconscious by Grimes and other prisoners then dragged him to a cell and locked him in.

WILLIAM A. PAINE, NOTED FINANCIER, IS DEAD

MADE RICHES IN COPPER INTERESTS

Seventy-four, Ill Two Weeks, One of Richest Men In Boston

William A. Paine, founder of the Boston banking house of Paine, Webber & Co., died today at his home at Beach Bluffs. He was 74 years old. He had been ill for two weeks.

Reputed one of the wealthiest men in Massachusetts, William Alfred Paine was one of the most colorful figures in Boston business circles. He rose to his commanding financial position entirely by his own efforts, having started in business without capital and with only a high school education.

His first job was as messenger for a shoe company. His next was that of a clerk in the Blackstone National Bank.

FORTUNE IN COPPER

With a fellow bank clerk, William G. Webber Paine founded Paine, Webber & Co., almost exactly 50 years ago. The new firm achieved moderate prosperity in the investment banking field, but it was not until Paine dabbled in copper in the early '90s that the tide of riches began to pour in.

Paine and Webber became famous through their copper negotiations and developments. Paine was dubbed as the "Copper King." He was one of New England's money powers from then on.

Until recent weeks, Paine was at his office daily, working longer hours than most of his employes. He was a golf player of note. For years he drove into Boston behind a pair of horses, disdaining automobile transportation.

SON OF A MINISTER,

Paine was born at Merrimacport January 28, 1855. He was the son of the Rev. Albert Paine, Congregational minister, Civil War chaplain and newspaper editor. The family lived at various times in Chelsea, Wisconsin, in Illinois and in Charlestown. Young William Paine was educated in the public schools of the successive communities in which he found himself. He was graduated from Charlestown High school.

At the time of his death Paine was not only at the head of numerous copper interests, but was also a director of the National Shawmut Bank, president of the West Virginia & Pittsburgh Coal Co., a trustee of the Boston Y M C A, and a member of the board of directors of the Boston Seamen's Friend Society.

He was a member of the Algonquin Club, Exchange Club and other prominent social organizations. His Boston home was at 409 Commonwealth ave.

NABS BURGLAR SUSPECTS IN MATTAPAN

Sneeze From Sugar Sacks Betrays Two Youths to Patrolman Fullerton

Hiding in sugar bags failed to save two alleged burglars from arrest in a Mattapan grocery store today by Patrolman William Fullerton of Morton st. police station.

The officer saw a window open in the rear of the store. He crawled in and searched the place, at first without success. Then he noticed two apparently well-filled sugar bags under a counter, but thought nothing of them until he heard a sneeze.

"Come out of there!" roared Fullerton.

The culprits with the sugar sacks still over heads and shoulders, staggered forth.

They said they were Leo McCormick, 22, of Bowdoin st., Medford, and Melvin Fernald, 20, of Bullard ave., Dorchester. They were booked on charges of breaking and entering.

They had an auto, alleged to have been stolen, and charges of larceny were to be filed against them later, police said.

HE'S 4, AND VICTIM HAS BROKEN ARM

Speedy Youngster Leaves Injured Man in His Wake on Boston Common

A "hit-and-run" scooter driver, described as blond, blue-eyed and about four years old, knocked down and injured Francis McGinnis, 39, of North Russell st., Beacon Hill.

McGinnis had a broken arm today as a souvenir of the encounter.

The accident occurred when the youngster, traveling at high speed down a Boston Common sidewalk, attempted to steer the scooter between McGinnis' legs, McGinnis said.

McGinnis fell. The scooter operator scooted.

Police today had a full description of the yellow-haired offender. The latter's parents may be asked to foot McGinnis' hospital bill.

Breaks Gum Machine

DRUG WOMAN, STEAL $206

Mrs. Julia Markunas, 45, of Dorchester ave., Dorchester, was robbed of $206 after she drank a glass of beer containing "knock out" drops handed to her by a strange man, Mrs. Markunas told she called to see a friend on Mulberry st., Chelsea, by the name of Victoria Jonowetz. Her friend was not at home, but a man there invited her to come in and wait. After a while he said he offered her a glass of beer. A few minutes after Mrs. Markunas drank the beer she lapsed into unconsciousness.

When the effect of the drug wore off, two hours later, Mrs. Markunas told, she said, to find her purse empty.

Weymouth Boy, 4, Is Killed by Auto

James Lawrence McCullagh, 4 year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James McCullagh of 545 Broad st., East Weymouth, was instantly killed when he was struck by an automobile in Central sq., near his home.

The automobile was operated by Herbert Bidwell of Broad st., Weymouth Landing.

Firemen Rescue Girl From Suffocation

Overcome by smoke that billowed up four flights of stairs, cutting off her escape, Miss Marie Collins was carried to safety over a roof and down a ladder by firemen today during a blaze that drove several lodgers from 445 Harrison ave., South End. The fire started in a basement apartment from spontaneous combustion. Before she was aware of the danger, Miss Collins was choking in her room from smoke seeping up the stairs.

She tore down a lace curtain from a window and wetting it placed it over her face and attempted to descend the stairway, but was forced back.

She then made her way to the window and called for help before collapsing.

Laddermen Kenneally and McClusky fought their way up the stairs and into the room and carried her through a skylight to the roof and down a ladder.

E. N. Germaney conducts the lodging house. Damage from the blaze was about $1500.

Ex-Cop Is Nabbed as Tipsy Driver

Former Patrolman Jeremiah J Pitts of the Boston police department, who resigned a year ago, was arrested in front of police headquarters on Berkeley st. by members of the headquarters flying squadron, on charges of driving an automobile under the influence of liquor.

Whist Party Held By Mothers' Club

The Beachmont Mother's Club opened its social calendar for the season with a whist party in the Beachmont Bungalow. Mrs. Helen Buckley was in charge. Other events to take place soon are a barn dance, costume party and a harvest whist.

SESSION OPENS AT RADCLIFFE

"Make your thinking worthy to be entrusted into life. 'As we think, we live!' " President Ada L. Comstock of Radcliffe College, Cambridge, advised the students of the college at the formal opening in the First Church, Cambridge.

Miss Comstock also traced the history of the college briefly from its beginning 51 years ago with 34 students to its present size and took a glance into what the future of the college might be.

Miss Catherine Cliff of Boston, president of the Student Government Association, and Dean Bernice V. Brown addressed the student body with a few words of greeting and the Rev. Raymond Calkins, D. D., gave the invocation.

Miss Margaret Williams of River Forest, Illinois vice-president of the Student Government, marshalled the students, and Miss Priscilla Gough, college marshal, marshalled the dignitaries, who included, Miss Bertha Wiea, Mr. John Lowes, Jr., Arda Green and Miss Harriet C. Buckingham.

BAUER PLACES A BAN ON SIGNS

There are not going to be any advertising signs in Lynn, if Mayor Ralph S. Bauer can help it.

Boston & Maine painters this morning painted the words "Boston & Maine" on the Market st bridge, but when they attempted to place a similar inscription upon the Central sq. bridge it was too much.

Mayor Bauer arrived on the scene just as Harvey Merrill and his crew of painters were ascending their ladders preparatory to inscribing the bridge. Patrolman Arthur Murphy, who had been hired by the Boston & Maine to protect passersby from being splashed with paint, was ordered to arrest the men if they try to continue the painting.

The painters retired from the scene. Mayor Bauer says he will have the sign on the Market st bridge painted over.

Parochial School Planned at Dedham

The first move to establish a parochial school in Dedham has been made and the Rev. George P. O'Connor, pastor of St. Mary's Church, has made preparations for the opening of a kindergarten on October 1. The new school class will be established in the renovated Guild Hall in the rear of the church on Avery st. and will start with 70 pupils who have already enrolled. The upper hall will be renovated into a convent to house the teaching Sisters.

The superior will be Sister M. Alfred who comes to Dedham from St. John's Parish School of Quincy where she has been teaching for the last six years. The parish already owns a parcel of land on High st. where in time, when funds are available, a modern school building will be erected.

Fail to Find Body of Roxbury Canoeist

Searchers who dragged the Penobscot river below the water works dam in Bangor, Me., had not found the body of George Law, 28, of Dudley st., Roxbury, an oiler on the steamer Belfast, who was drowned by the upsetting of a canoe.

Law and another member of the crew, Charles Hanna of Boston, hired a canoe and paddled up the river about a mile. They went too near the sluiceway below the dam, where the swift water overturned the canoe.

Dedham Couple to Marry on October 5

A wedding of wide interest which takes place in St. Mary's Church, High st., Dedham, Saturday morning, Oct. 5, is that of Miss Alice Mary Lynch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Lynch, and Frank Joseph Carey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Carey of Mt. Vernon st., Dedham.

The bride is an employe of the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds and a graduate of the Dedham high school. The groom-elect is the son of Henry M. Carey. He is a graduate of the Dedham high school, where he was prominent in athletics.

Sargent New Chief of Clinton Police

Clinton, Sept. 24—At a meeting of the board of selectmen the resignation of C. Clifford Stone as chief of police was received. He, today, became a state automobile inspector.

The board appointed as his successor Frank Sargent, who for the last year and a half has been fire engineer. Sargent was immediately sworn in. To fill vacancies on the board of fire engineers, the selectmen appointed William L. Jefferson and John S. Carey.

JUDGE ROBERT GRANT UPHOLDS MAYOR'S BAN OF "INTERLUDE"

ASSERTS 'IT IS TIME TO CRY HALT'

Rape Censorship, but Commends Hub as Keeping 'Sewers Under Cover'

Judge Robert Grant, formerly of the Probate Court, and himself an author of numerous novels, some of which aroused much controversy, today came to the support of Mayor Nichols, who has put a final bar on "Strange Interlude."

Although saying he does not believe in literary censorship, Judge Grant declared that "as a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, I think it is time to cry a halt."

Referring to Mayor Nichols' action, he said:

"This challenge by Mayor Nichols to the complacency of the band of untrammelled but self-advertising young men and women who tells us what to read and why, will show at least that our majority, however bourgeoise, still purposes to keep sewers under cover."

Mayor Edward W. Quinn of Cambridge announced that "Strange Interlude" would not be permitted in that city. His decision was taken after reading excerpts from the play.

Judge Grant, member of an old Boston family, is author of nearly 30 books, a number of them dealing with sex marriage and divorce. Among the better known of his works were "The Chippendales," dealing with Boston families, "The High Priestess," concerning itself with "feminist" marriage, "Unleavened Bread," "The Reflections of a Married Man," "The Opinions of a Philosopher," and "The Convictions of a Grandfather."

"I do not believe in literary censorship," said Judge Grant in part. "A stream will not rise higher than its source, nor fall much lower. The right to discuss social problems freely is a safeguard to liberty.

"A play that had run all winter in New York and the gauntlet of London might well have encouraged Mayor Nichols to emulate the example of a saloon keeper who when asked: 'Is Michael Doherty good for a drink?' replied, 'Has he had it?'

"An easy-going world, outside of Boston, had already accepted the play that has caused all this bother.

BOSTON ON ITS OWN

"But our mayor at least has shown himself a man of courage, and as the New York Times hinted in its pleasant article, 'By-Products, Boston is entitled to its own opinion, even against the world.

"The essential inquiry in every controversy is 'What are the facts?' Not many who are vociferously discussing this question have read the play, I understand

Found Girl on Desk in Her Husband's Locked Office, Says Wife

TOLD HE RAN HIS BUSINESS ON WINE

Mrs. Craigin Makes Startling Counter-Charges in Her Mate's Suit for Divorce

How she visited her husband's office in Quincy, found the door locked and later, when it was opened, discovered Miss Madelyne G. Adams of Brockton, an office assistant, seated on his desk, was described in Dedham probate court before Judge Joseph R. McCoole today by Mrs. Catherine C. Cragin.

Mrs. Cragin, who is defending [illegible] in an action for divorce [illegible] by Edward L. Cragin, president and manager of the Wholesale and Retail Protective Association, charges [illegible] with [illegible] the [illegible] of intemperance. The respondent denies the charges on the ground of cruel and [illegible] treatment and the suit is a counter action to the petition for divorce.

"He would become [illegible] when he came home and found only Miss Adams inside, my husband told me he was going to discharge her from his employ," testified Mrs. Cragin. "All she was doing when the door was finally unlocked was sitting on a desk."

GIRL DESIRED CHARGE

"The first time I saw my husband with Miss Adams was on March 31, 1924, in South Station. He asked me if I went to the office and seemed Miss Adams of being sentimental with my husband, but she denied that she had been. [illegible] with him in South Station, where I had gone home together and he left me a [illegible] girls and kept the office [illegible] with wine.

"On that first visit to the office Miss Adams told me that my husband was out with a [illegible] of the office force. She added that [illegible] him to Europe [illegible] with him.

"On April 5 I went to the home of Miss Adams' parents in Spencer and called the matter over with them. I told her mother that the Scarlets should not be going around with an old man like my husband, and that [illegible] Miss Adams' mother said she would bring [illegible] husband for his actions. Later I learned that he did not talk to his daughter for six weeks because of this affair."

TELLS OF CRUELTY.

With reference to her charge of cruelty, Mrs Cragin testified her husband kicked her December 25, 1928, and on February 11 and 12 of the same year, brandished a carving knife at her and said he would kill her.

She also testified that late in April 1929, he called her vile names and demanded her of going out with other men and spending money on them. She also testified that her husband took money from the toy banks of their four children and paid taxes on his home with it.

Judge McCoole talked privately at length in his lobby with Edward and Robert Cragin, 14 and 12, the eldest children of the couple, during a recess.

During yesterday's hearing Cragin's mother, Mrs. Mary Cragin, 70, of Portland, Me., testified against her son and said she warned him to keep away from Miss Adams or his home would be broken up.

Love Suit No Bar to Her

Mrs. Esther H. Fleury of Boston, elected teacher of sewing and cooking in Salem schools after first having been barred there because of her divorce.

DIVORCEE WINS BACK HER JOB

Mrs. Esther Fleury of Boston was officially informed today that she can teach sewing and cookery at the Salem High School—even if she is a divorcee.

A special meeting of the Salem school committee put Mrs. Fleury's status to a vote. Six members out of seven voted that the young teacher's family affairs of the past need not affect her present ability to instruct high school girls in the arts of running a seam and frying doughnuts.

The school committee's action in support of Mrs. Fleury was hailed with widespread approval today throughout the city of Salem and the Commonwealth. Public officials, educators and friends of the teacher herself commented favorably upon the "fairness" and "modernism" of the committee's decision.

Mrs. Fleury's original appointment was recommended by the Salem superintendent of schools who, after a personal interview, found the teacher "admirably fitted" for the post she sought. She will be paid for the week she has missed classes.

Slight Rise Shown in Cost of Living

An increase of 9-10 of 1 per cent in the cost of living was reported today by the commission on the necessaries of life for August, as compared with July. Higher prices for food and clothing, the commission says, caused the slight increase.

The purchasing power of the dollar in August was about 61½ cents, based on 1913 pre-war prices, the commission said.

HEALTH UNIT IS DEDICATED

The Roxbury Health Unit, another monument to the philanthropic tendencies of the late George Robert White, was dedicated and accepted by Timothy Donovan, acting for the mayor, in behalf of the city at Blue Hill ave. and Beaver st., Roxbury, today.

In the presence of close to 500 residents of the neighborhood, most of them mothers, the building was presented to the city by George E. Phelan, manager of the George Robert White Fund.

This is the fourth unit of its kind to be erected in Boston. The fifth is to be dedicated in Charlestown, soon, and ground has already been cleared at Blossom st., West End, for the sixth unit.

Mgr. Patrick J. Supple, pastor of St. John's Church, Roxbury, offered prayer, after which the keys to the building were presented to Thomas Proctor, one of the trustees, by Henry R. Shepley, architect.

BAN ON HISSING 'BLACK CROOK' STIRS MORLEY

Producer, Amazed, Says He Cannot Understand the Hub Rules, but Will Obey Them

"The Black Crook" without hissing is comparable to soda without Scotch, in the opinion of Christopher Morley, producer of the play, expressed as he left for New York today.

However, he made it clear that the management will abide by the ruling of Samuel Silverman, assistant corporation counsel of Boston, and eliminate hissing from future performances at the Apollo Theater.

[illegible] performance of the revived Black [illegible] Silverman, as the [illegible] of the first one that [illegible] stopped. He added that even if the audience heard with the part "claque," it could not be permitted in Boston.

To all of which Morley shook his head in sorrowful amaze, and expressed his bewilderment at Boston customs.

"I am astounded," he said, "such a ruling, although of course we will obey it. In the olden days the villain was always hissed by the audience and the hero applauded tumultuously.

"At the original presentation of 'The Black Crook' in this country [illegible] found fun in not having the [illegible] hissed, explaining, [illegible] that Boston would go to the [illegible].

It is a pity that Boston audiences are to be denied the pleasure of expressing their feelings in a time of this kind. Hissing is in keeping with the atmosphere of The Black Crook, and it is the first time in my experience that a play was seen [illegible] it should not be.

Even as the passing [illegible] prices express their disapproval by [illegible] of being [illegible] in movies pictures, houses when [illegible] scenes are displayed to the [illegible].

FISH MARKET PRICES DROP

A spurt in mackerel arrivals with 268,000 pounds from Provincetown Bay and Thatchers Island, sent prices tumbling in that variety today at the Fish Pier.

Most of the catch was the small blink or tinker type and were quoted by wholesalers at 5½ to 6 cents per pound. The schooner Alleia was high with 58,000 pounds.

Today's arrivals sent prices a trifle lower than yesterday due to the arrival of eight steam trawlers and 10 schooners with fairly good holds.

Prices quoted were: Large codfish, 10 to 10½ cents per pound; market cod, 6 to 7; haddock, 7 to 8; pollock, 5½ to 6; hake, 5 to 5½; cusk, 5 to 5½; blink mackerel, 5½ to 6; lemon soles, 13 to 14; gray soles, 10 to 11, and flounders, 7 to 8 cents.

2 Disabled Trawlers Arrived at Fish Pier

Two steam trawlers reported disabled at the Fish pier today, one abandoning her trip with no catch and the other bringing but 40,000 pounds.

The steamer Crest experienced engine trouble on the way to the fishing grounds at Georges Bank and turned about. She was able to make her way, in as near as her trawler Ripple, which headed home with her small catch, when engine trouble developed at Georges

Case of Comm. Lane | Brockton in Series
Another Printer's Error | Dan Golden's Cleats

THAT BOXING COMMISSION MYSTERY SOLVED

HERE is the solution of a mystery which seems to be bothering a lot of the boys, judging by the phone calls and epistles. Debonair Dan Lane is going to stay on as Boxing Commissioner. Unless, of course, there's some political twist that doesn't appear on the face of things. That's alway possible.

NICK FLATLEY

Anyhow, Dan's term of office expired the other day. Nobody, except possibly Dan, seemed to know it. Governor Allen didn't, until Daniel himself called, to find out why he had not been nominated or given the air at the regular meeting of the Governor's Council.

The Gov. got busy, and discovered that the Lane term was over, but that the fact hadn't been recorded on the report of such things which comes to the Council meeting. A mistake of the printer is the acknowledged reason, which may, to be sure, explain an error by a clerk, or something of the kind. The printer always is blamed.

Word of the mixup leaked, as word will, and candidates began to appear hither and yon. Gov. Allen likes Lynn, so several nominees were discovered there, notably Chubby Bill Joyce, the football coacher. Then a campaign blossomed for Tom Niland of East Boston. Not to mention others.

But it was all a printer's mistake, take it from State House. And Dan is going to be back there. Which is okay, as he knows the racket.

Brockton in the Series

Dan Golden of Brockton, as hearty and two fisted an Irishman as you'll find in a month of Sundays, when they're easy to find, has brought Brockton into the world series. Dan has invented a baseball cleat, that will decorate the shoe of every Cub in the golden classic.

The same Daniel has always followed sports. He makes boxing shoes for the championship bouts. Sharkey and Loughran will wear them Thursday night. He has turned out spiked runners for the big leaguers for years.

This spring he devised a new cleat—something that had a spike at the back as well as on the sides and in front. His theory was that this would prevent any chance of slipping. He rambled up to Braves Field one day, and gave Hack Wilson a sales talk. Hack was in a slump and ready to listen to anything.

He let Daniel attach his new cleats to a pair of sod spurners. That day he knocked one into the left field bleachers. On the road trip that followed, he started to hit homers again. The Cubs called the spike the Homer Cleat, Manager Joe McCarthy ordered a set for his entire outfit for the series.

So Dan naturally is rooting for the Cubs, even though he loves the name of Cornelius McGillicuddy. But then, Joseph McCarthy is somewhat Celtic also.

This and That

Did you hear the one about the two Irishmen, Connie Mack and Joe McCarthy.

Doc Kendall was knocked off his bicycle, and hurt his hip. But it was the right hip, if you know what we mean. The medicine wasn't hurt.

Eddie Morris is a lucky speculator, but he seems to be tempting fate. He's interested in the Boston Football pros.

Bill Carrigan gets a Majestic radio and is thankful. But he would much rather have some one hand him a .350 hitting outfielder.

Hughey Duffy thinks collegians like Al Weston should be permitted to study and play for at least eight years. So does Joe McKenney.

Sig. Campolo had a bad hand and a bad back. Now he will produce a bad alibi. Not so clever, these Argentines.

Mons. A. Routis will not have to take on all comers now. Which may save him from walking on his heels for the rest of his life.

Did You Know?

That Bat Battalino will next appear at the Garden, with Andy Martin on the other end.

That Jim Maloney can be signed up with the Sharkey-Loughran winner, if he flattens his Italian foe at the Stadium Thursday.

That camels hair coats will be in vogue this fall. And that you couldn't walk a mile in most of them without freezing to death.

That Frank Cavanaugh has a son on the Fordham squad. And probably rides him harder than any other candidate.

That college football gets going Saturday. And will steal most of the thunder from the world series.

That Max Schmeling will probably stay in Europe, after reading what Horizontal Phil Scott did to Campolo.

Football Is Certainly a Pretty Tough Game!

The alternative is malted eggs, which will be given at the close of the rest period.

The men have been using too much water in bathing following practice, and the amount is to be cut. The water will be regulated by a rotary shower and will range from a tepid warm to a dash of moderately cold.

State to Open Golf Course at Weston

FIRST LAYOUT OF KIND IN COUNTRY WILL BE READY FOR PLAY NEXT SPRING

WHAT is believed to be the first state owned and operated golf course in the country will be opened next spring at the Riverside Recreational Grounds in Weston.

Though municipal courses now total close to 200 throughout the country, as far as is known Massachusetts will have the first state course.

The establishment of this nine-hole course is due largely to the work of George B. Wason, member of the Metropolitan District Commission, and of Representative Thomas R. Bateman of Winchester. William F. Garcelon, Boston attorney and former president of the Massachusets Golf Association, did a lot of investigating of costs and expenses, based on statistics of municipally-owned courses throughout the country.

"This course at Weston will be largely in the form of an experiment," Garcelon told the American today. "If it proves to be a success, financially and otherwise, I believe other courses will be established under direction of the Metropolitan District Commission."

In 1923, he explained, Representative Bateman introduced a measure for an investigation of possible sites for State-owned courses. The Legislature, however, did not provide an appropriation for the proposed work. It was decided, after investigating the costs and expenses of various municipal courses, to establish a nine-hole course at Weston out of the general fund of the Metropolitan Commission.

"A study of operating costs and revenue of municipal courses," Garcelon said, "shows that a golf course is really a money-making proposition for the state.

"Assuming that the initial cost of the course is $100,000, the upkeep $16,000 and the revenue $24,000, the course would pay for itself in 19 years. In fact the experience of municipalities in operating courses in various cities shows the margin of yearly profit to be much larger, charging a nominal fee of 50 to 75 cents a round."

At the Franklin Park course, Garcelon pointed out, the cost of operation has averaged $14,000 to $18,000 a year, while the revenue has been close to $30,000 for the past several years. The latest available figure for revenue received is $30,786 for 1927.

Smith Tells How to Play Mashie Shots

By HORTON SMITH
North-South and French Professional Champion

WITH the mashie, even more so than with the iron, mere distance counts for very little. Accuracy is the all-important factor; the ability to place your approach near the pin makes all the difference between your being a mediocre and a good player.

If occasionally you hear of some player who can get as far with his mashie as most people get with their spoon, do not be tempted to emulate him.

Stick to the golden rules which every great mashie player has laid down—i. e., do not force a mashie to give you distance for which the club was never intended. Play "within the power of the club." Place accuracy of direction before everything else.

FOR advice on playing an ordinary plain, full mashie shot (without any of these intricate attempts at "stopping" or "pushing" the stroke), I can state:

Your stance should be automatically closer to the ball than in any previously discussed stroke, because the shaft of the mashie is shorter than any other club.

DON'T squat when addressing the ball. Stand up to it, remembering that the swing is more upright than with a wooden club.

Proceed, therefore, on the basis that the mashie is a half-driver, i. e., let the top of your swing for a full mashie be at the point that you would call "half-way-up" in your full drive.

For shorter shots, let there be a corresponding reduction in the distance you take the club back.

Grid Gleanings

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 24 (INS)—Minus five of his stars who are off on a geology tour, Coach Bill Roper is putting the Princeton football squad through light drills. Heavy work will be resumed soon.

Ithaca, N. Y., Sept. 24 (INS)—His regular center out with a broken toe, Coach Gil Dobie searched his Cornell squad for a capable pivot man.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 24 (INS)—Another hard-charging back has been uncovered at Yale to share honors with Albie Booth. Herb Miller, halfback, is the newcomer.

West Point, N. Y., Sept. 24 (INS)—With the opening game with Boston University only a few days off, Coach Biff Jones plans to work his army squad overtime the remainder of this week. Jones has yet to find a suitable line combination.

New York, Sept. 24 (INS)—The continued use of Jones in the backfield has led to the conviction that Coach Chick Meehan has definitely given up the idea of using Dave Myers as anything other than a guard. Team A, as selected by Meehan, has Follett, La Mark, O'Herin and Jones in the backfield.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 24 (INS)—Navy is planning to work overtime during the days remaining before their opening clash with Dennison.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Sept. 24 (INS)—Captain Ray Farris' star guard, was back in the Tar Heel lineup today after a two weeks' layoff on account of tonsilitis. He looked good in a long line scrimmage.

Athens, Ga., Sept. 24 (INS)—An incitement, brand of weather, is hampering the training of the Georgia Bulldogs.

A soggy field resulted in a rest from scrimmage and indications were that weather of the same kind might preclude a heavy practice session.

Yanks, Minus Pilot and Stars, Open Series With Sox

RUTH WILL BE HONORED THIS P.M.

By JOE CASHMAN

BABE RUTH DAY!

Baseball's greatest and most popular player ever will receive a beautiful silver loving cup, a gift of a few personal friends, and a mighty welcome from his legion of Hub admirers when he and the Yanks open their final local series of 1929 at the Fens this afternoon.

Except for the Bambino, however, the Yanks who take the field this p. m. and again tomorrow will be almost total strangers to native fans.

Instead of the arrogant, all-powerful and almost unconquerable champions who have sported the New York livery ever since 1926, the customers will see a sorrowful and meek group of athletes, many of whom have never played here before.

Joe Cashman

Such stars as Herb Pennock, Waite Hoyt, Bob Meusel, Sam Byrd and other lesser lights have been paid off for the season because the team long since lost all chance of winning the pennant and there is little danger of it dropping below second.

And the players who remain will be at the Fens in person, but in spirit they will be over in St. Vincent's Hospital in New York, where their beloved manager, Miller Huggins, who led them to six pennants in eight years, is fighting for his life, with the odds very much against him.

AS for licking this team, though, the Sox will probably find it harder than when they were meeting it at the height of its power.

For news of Yankee victories would probably help Huggins more than anything the greatest medical specialists could do for him and his hired men, each and every one of whom loves and respects him and knows that it is the energy he spent in trying to land them on top this season that is responsible for his present plight, are determined that he will get only good reports of their activities.

Especially is this true of Ruth, who has been Miller's greatest admirer ever since the mighty mite proved that he and not the Bambino was the real boss of the club, and in a crisis like this the Bambino has the habit of becoming a superman who can make the weak set team look like the strongest.

So, although the Yanks will be leaderless and without several of their best players, it's a good bet that the Sox won't have any pink tea party today and tomorrow.

THIS series will not only mark the farewell appearance of the New Yorkers here this season but also several of the players as Yanks for all time.

When the team failed to win the American League flag for the fourth consecutive time this season, Huggins decided upon a wholesale house-cleaning.

If the pilot recovers, as fans everywhere are hoping and praying that he will, he will go through with his plans. If he should pass away, the chances are the players will go anyway.

Meusel, already through for the year, is listed as one of these. Koenig is another. Paschal, Durst go, more than 20 more freshman aspirants reported to Coach Art French at the locker building today.

This is the largest squad that has ever turned out for first year football, and Coach French was greatly pleased at the response which he got in his new role as grid mentor for the yearlings.

In addressing the crowd of young hopefuls, French stressed the need of strict attention to the business at hand. He asked his charges to observe the training table regulations strictly in order to prepare themselves as quickly as possible for their first game, which is scheduled for October 5.

Although he has yet to see his first freshman team in action as an eleven, Art feels confident that this year's outfit will turn in just as good a record as the teams of the preceding freshman classes of the past three years.

Many former schoolboy stars and captains from all over the country are enrolled in the long list of candidates.

HUB PAYS HOMAGE TO "SULTAN"

Babe Ruth may wear a Yankee uniform, but Hub fans still regard him as one of their own. Today, at Fenway Park, the Sultan of Swat is to be presented with a silver loving cup, the gift of his many friends and admirers. Today is the last time the Babe appears in the Hub this season.

170 CRIMSON FROSH REPORT

With over 150 Harvard yearlings already in uniform and ready to go, more than 20 more freshman aspirants reported to Coach Art French at the locker building today.

This is the largest squad that has ever turned out for first year football, and Coach French was greatly pleased at the response which he got in his new role as grid mentor for the yearlings.

In addressing the crowd of young hopefuls, French stressed the need of strict attention to the business at hand. He asked his charges to observe the training table regulations strictly in order to prepare themselves as quickly as possible for their first game, which is scheduled for October 5.

Although he has yet to see his first freshman team in action as an eleven, Art feels confident that this year's outfit will turn in just as good a record as the teams of the preceding freshman classes of the past three years.

Many former schoolboy stars and captains from all over the country are enrolled in the long list of candidates.

Eager to See Sharkey

Newark, N. J., Sept. 24—Jack Sharkey, Boston heavyweight contender, born Joseph Paul Cucciehay is to receive a formal invitation from the Lithuanian government to visit the land of his parents. The invitation was brought by M. Aksalis, Newark merchant.

Captain Stops to Take Bride; Mates Keep Going

THE absence of Capt.-elect Seaward at the first cross-country workout at Tufts today led to the disclosure that he became a benedict September 14 and will not return to school until the latter part of this week.

The name of the bride could not be learned from his friends, but the members of the squad assure him a hearty welcome upon his return.

The rest of the cross-country men reported to Coach William S Yeager for the initial workout of the season.

Indications are that this year's harriers will make a good record with Capt. Carl Seaward back in school with ex-Capt. Wiles, Munroe, Meuse, Edinger and Drew from last year's group reporting again.

Two outstanding men from last season's freshman team who reported were Stanley and Simmons.

An innovation this year will be the finish of the Amherst and Conn. Aggie meets between the halves of the football games with these schools.

The schedule: October 11, Northeastern; October 19, Conn. Aggie; October 26, B. U.; November 1, Wesleyan; November 9, Amherst; November 18, N. E. intercollegiates.

Natick Boys' Club Wants Grid Games

GIRLS ENTERED IN TRACK MEET

New England's foremost women athletes will be seen in action Sunday afternoon at Russell Field, North Cambridge, in an athletic meet under the auspices of the Columbus Day Nursery Guild.

The proceeds of this track and field carnival will be turned over to the Cambridge organization in order to help defray expenses for the coming year.

Two members of Uncle Sam's Olympic team will be on hand to help put the affair over. Rena MacDonald, world's champion shot putter, and Olive Hasenfus, one of the best over the 100-yard route, and holder of the New England record for the distance, are the young misses who will appear.

There also will be races for the men. Mayor Quinn is chairman of the committee in charge of the meet and he is being assisted by the members of the Nursery Guild.

SHARKEY AND LOUGHRAN READY

NEW YORK, Sept. 24—With their scheduled bout at the Yankee stadium but three days away, Jack Sharkey, Boston claimant to the heavyweight championship crown, and Tommy Loughran, Philadelphia contender, report that they are in the best shape of their careers.

Sharkey will finish his training today. He plans to box three or four rounds and do a little road work tomorrow. He will remain at his Orangeburg training camp until Thursday morning, when he will leave for New York.

The Hub battler weighed 193½ after his last workout and declared that he never felt in better condition. In order to build up speed and improve his boxing, Sharkey took on Arthur Flynn of Lawrence, Mass., and Armand Emanuel, who meets Jim Maloney in the semi-final.

The fact that Emanuel has fought Loughran twice helped Sharkey to learn a few points about Tommy's style, Sharkey impressed spectators with his speed and the accuracy of his punches.

His judgment of distance was perfect, and his defense against the skilful attack of Emanuel gave rise to the belief that Loughran will have difficulty in landing a solid blow.

Tommy Loughran finished his training at Harvey's Lake, Pa. He planned to leave today for New York to spend the evening aboard the yacht of William Fremhoffer at anchor in the Hudson river.

Frankie Cawley was Loughran's only sparring mate yesterday. Reports from the camp indicate that Loughran has developed a good body punch. Jack Wolf, one of his sparring mates, was forced to quit with a fractured rib, while Harry Nealon, another partner, insists that Tommy's punches to his midsection were too hard to stand any longer.

Sharkey Will Have Plenty of Speed

By JACK SHARKEY

ORANGEBURG, N. Y., Sept. 24—During the closing days of my training for my 15-round bout with Tommy Loughran at the Yankee Stadium on Thursday night, I have been devoting most of my time to increasing my speed and improving my boxing.

Jack Sharkey

This program sent Armand Emanuel, coast heavyweight, and Arthur Flynn of Lawrence against me in my gym workouts. Emanuel and Flynn are two of the fastest men in the ring. They carried me along at a lively clip. They made me speed up and I was pleased when Johnny Buckley declared he was satisfied with my showing.

I was particularly pleased at the opportunity to work with Emanuel, as he twice gave Tommy Loughran sturdy battles. The coast youth is blessed with a marvelous [illegible] which moves as rapidly as bullets spattering from the [illegible] gun.

I can see how he was able [illegible] to make things so interesting for Loughran.

Emanuel also packs a stiff wallop in his right mitt. I look for a great fight when Armand clashes with Jim Maloney in the semi-final on Thursday night. Maloney is in the midst of a wild victory surge and it will take a great fighter to defeat him.

I boxed a round each with Emanuel, Flynn and Jack Gagnon. In addition I pushed away at the small bag for two rounds, the big bag for a session and skipped rope for one round.

I WEIGHED 193½ pounds when I ended my workout. This is just three-fourths of a pound more than I scaled when I defeated Young Stribling at Miami, Fla. This indicates to me that I am in the best possible condition for my clash with Loughran on Thursday night.

My [illegible] training [illegible] me to my fighting peak. I have not a pain or ache in my body and am prepared to step into the ring Thursday night confident that everything I have in the fighting line [illegible].

I am not worrying about this battle, as I feel I have Loughran's number. I'll entertain him the same as I did Wills, Godfrey, Maloney and McTigue.

I NOTICE that some of the sports writers say I'm in love with the boxing game once more. Why shouldn't I be with an opportunity to win the heavyweight championship?

Once more before leaving camp Loughran camp to-day offered to wager $1,000 on the result of the fight with a team of sports to back Tommy to score stoppage of [illegible] Jack Dempsey. If he [illegible] he is [illegible] me as to my correct weight he is wrong.

I KNOW as well as Loughran that he would not be right at [illegible] weight. [illegible] I am really [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] when [illegible] are being seen. [illegible]

One of the Garden officials showed me the plans for the new arena at Miami, [illegible] which seats 50,000 persons and will be the only outdoor boxing arena [illegible] Each [illegible] will be the [illegible]

N. U. Seniors to Be Barred From Sport

A new rule which will eliminate seniors from participating on varsity athletic teams at Northeastern beginning 1933-34 was announced yesterday by Athletic Director Edward Parsons.

The rule was passed by the faculty committee on athletics comprising Prof. Winthrop E Nightingale, chairman; Prof. Parsons, Prof. John B. Pugsley and Prof. Harold W. Melvin.

The first class to be affected by this rule is the present freshman group, which entered the university under the new five-year curriculum which went into effect this fall in the day division, embracing the School of Engineering and the School of Business Administration.

BATTALINO NEW FEATHER KING

Hartford, Ct., Sept. 24—Christopher "Dat" Battalino brought the featherweight crown back to the United States when he defeated Andre Routis, French titleholder, in a 15-round bout at Hurley's Stadium.

Practically unknown outside of his native state, Battalino went into the fight a favorite, and Referee Bill Conway, who was sole arbiter of the battle, gave every round to Battalino and, incidentally, with his decision, the title.

A crowd of 17,000 paid $50,000 to see the fight, a record for boxing in Connecticut.

The bout was closely fought throughout. Both fighters slipped to the canvas, but there were no clean knockdowns, and at no time ever in any danger of a knockout.

Battalino succeeds to the crown formerly held by Kid Chocolate, other Connecticut boy, who outgrew the feather class. Routis won the title just about a year ago from Tony Canzoneri.

Routis was beaten by Honeyboy Finnegan in Boston in the opening show of the Boston Garden, but the bout did not involve the title.

In the first preliminary, Frankie Martin of Pittsfield, Mass., defeated Roland Roche of Holyoke, in a four-round decision affair. Roche weighed 136½, Martin 126.

Joe Zotter of New Britain, Ct., knocked out Johnny Kop of Norwich, after one minute of fighting in the third round. Zotter weighed 125½, Kop 127.

RAWSON K. O.'S MILLS IN 1ST

Big Ray Rawson of Dedham knocked out Bob Mills of Lynn in N. E. after one minute and 20 seconds of the first round in a scheduled 10-round bout at the Boston Arena.

It was for third week [illegible] two heavy hitters, each having won a previous bout by the K. O. route. By his one-round victory, Rawson now stands a chance of meeting Pat McCarthy, Tom Kirby or Joe Monte and advancing into the [illegible] class.

Strong Somerville Eleven Will Face Cranston High

OPENER FOR RED AND BLUE SATURDAY

GRADUATION took many of Somerville high school's football stars but there are no traces of pessimism noticeable in the Red and Blue camp as the team prepares for its opening game with Cranston high of Rhode Island on next Saturday.

Coach Charlie Dickerman is counting heavily on last year's second string men to give Somerville a strong eleven, and from the out line of work done in practice sessions he will not be disappointed.

Last Friday Somerville scrimmaged with Chelsea and won, 12-6, which may or may not prove anything in view of the fact that Leverett was defeated by this same Chelsea outfit only a day or so previous to the scrap with Somerville.

Of the backs Eddie Martin, Don Walls and Nick Votsis stand out as the most promising. These three youths are the only lettermen on the squad.

Jeremiah and Lynch hat a fine at calling signals and both have a good kick good. Jack Flyan, a transfer from B. C. high, is out for a fullback berth. Jim Ryan and Ed Perry also aspire to become regular ball carriers.

Phil Parker, Art Mahan, Rod Metcalf, Parker, Dalton, Cliff Austin, Maurice Breen and Mal Remsey are seeking wing positions. Ramsey is tall and rangy. He looks like first-string material.

Howe, Hegan and Jim Doolin seem to have things their own way in the tackle position.

Bob Reed and Jim Stevenson will be the regular guards.

Cross, Plumer and Jordan compose the trio after the pivot position. Plumer flashed some good football in the scrimmage with Chelsea, and is sure to make his rivals hustle for the snapper-back berth.

About 60 boys are in the squad, which is being handled by Coach Dickman and his assistant, Pat McKelvey.

Captain Francis Escott, fleet halfback, has an injured knee and may not get into uniform until late in the season. He feels fit now, but Coach Dickerman does not wish to take any unnecessary chances with his stellar ball carrier until he is sure that the injured knee is normal again.

A glance at the annual report of the Somerville School Department shows that the athletic treasury of the high school is in a healthy condition. Profits accruing from the 1928 season were $12,861.61. In 1927, the year's season tickets sold was 800. 1928 figures show that 1800 season tickets were sold last season. The increase in athletic receipts is evidently due to the hustling spirit of Frank L. Alciere, Somerville high school's efficient faculty manager of athletics.

For the benefit of those fans who are in doubt concerning the three-year eligibility rule governing those schools in the Headmasters' Association, here is the text of the ruling: "No pupil is eligible to represent a secondary school in athletics who has been in attendance more than three years or six semesters in a regular senior or three-year high school, nor who has been in attendance more than four years or eight semesters in a regular four-year high school."

All this means that youths who have attended a high school for three years, even though they may never have gone out for athletics in that time, are barred from interscholastic competition.

Lorne Johnson, Lynn Classical's star back last season, will be in the lineup of the Samuel Johnson Academy of Connecticut this year. Frank Silva, an East Boston boy, is coach of the team.

A pivot man is needed at Exeter Academy. Coach Blake is trying Bob Melfort and Otto Lemke at center in an effort to fill the gap there.

There will be no formal dedication exercises at the opening of Milton's new field houses on October 5, although city officials will be present. The new building named the Ralph L. Kendall Field House, in honor of Medford's popular faculty manager of athletics, will not be fully completed before that date.

Fred "Fish" Ellis, former Tufts football star, is handling the gridiron destinies of Bridgton Academy this season. Bridgton will open with 240th Artillery eleven on next Saturday. About 40 candidates are out for positions. Ten of last year's team are back again.

Mansfield High, coached by James Kelly, will follow this card on the gridiron: Sept. 28, at Ashland; Oct. 5, Bridgewater; Oct. 12, at Walpole; Oct. 19, Middleboro; Oct. 26, at Canton; Nov. 2, at Stoughton; Nov. 11, North Attleboro; Nov. 23, at Wellesley.

Arlington High has but three veterans. Blame the three-year rule. Trade vets are: Charles Lane, an end; modern Gabucci, quarterback; and Hegaman, a tackle. No captain has been elected.

B. U. SECONDS TO TACKLE VARSITY

COACHES REGGIE BROWN and Ed Robinson will send Boston University's first eleven against the seconds at Nickerson Field this afternoon in the first of two scrimmages to be held this week before the Terriers take the field against West Point Saturday.

The final set-to between the varsity and scrubs will be held Thursday and will be the final drill in preparation for the Cadets as the entire B. U. squad will embark for West Point Friday morning.

The Terrier mentors will spend most of their time for the rest of the week in developing the team's offense which has not been working as smoothly of late as they would like to have it.

CHANGES DUE IN TUFTS TEAM

Head coach Arthur Sampson will put his charges through an intensive blocking and tackling drill this afternoon preparatory to tomorrow's scrimmage at the Tufts Oval.

The entire squad is now ready for hard work and the next few days will show Sampson the men who are capable of holding down the starting assignments.

There will no doubt be several men who will have the chance to show what they can do during the next few scrimmage sessions.

The backfield situation still is the question mark which will probably be settled this week.

CREEDON, B. C. PILOT, HURT

Boston College may open its 1929 football wars against C. U. next Saturday afternoon without Capt. Paddy Creedon in the lineup. The small leader of the Eagles has an injured ankle.

Creedon is being treated with the violet ray lamp by Trainer Jonas, who has informed Coach Joe McKenney that his captain's injury is of a minor nature.

Paddy, too, states that his leg is all right.

But Creedon's bones are very brittle. He's had trouble with the ungainly ankle he started playing college football. A twist of the ankle or another bruise would render him a bencher for the initial collision.

With Creedon out of the lineup the Boston College team would be handicapped in its aerial game, upon which great hopes are resting.

Coach McKenney is planning to scrimmage his boys twice this week. The first skirmish may take place today, depending on the weather.

Herman is one of the big guns on the Boston College eleven. With three years' experience, 210 pounds of sinew he stands head and shoulders over all the other linemen on the B. C. squad.

As the game nears it seems that Al Morelli and Jack Maloney are going to start in the guard berths. Bud Gorman and Austin Brosnan, who were offering a good battle for the jobs, both were injured, and Maloney and Morelli have little to disturb their progress now.

Hard Drill for Crusader Squad

Worcester, Sept. 24—Holy Cross's varsity football candidates worked without letup for three hours in one of the stiffest drills of the year.

Line Coaches Luke Kelley and Gus Cervini worked with the linemen. Neither is ready to say that a first string line is about to be selected, for it is possible that some more shifts will be made in the guard and tackle berths.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf's Greatest Teacher

In simple practice swings, say with an iron, you can easily observe how your hands roll through the ball as the clubhead sweeps through. They roll easily and naturally in these practice swings because your wrists are free and relaxed. If you will keep your wrists as free in your real swing, with the ball in sight, the rolling action will take place the same way. Now on the contrary if you stiffen your wrists, with the ball in sight, your right hand, instead of turning over and on top of the left, for some peculiar reason, goes underneath the left—just the reverse. This causes the ball to be slapped instead of stroked, usually as the clubhead is starting upward from the bottom of its arc. This ball will either slice or fade at the end of its carry.

Roslindale Team to Be Given Banquet

The merchants, business and professional men of Roslindale will give the Roslindale Twilight League team, champions of 1929, a testimonial banquet at the Roslindale Municipal Building on Thursday evening.

Harry H. Storer is chairman of the general committee and is being assisted by James Finlay and Thomas Connors.

A varied program of entertainment has been arranged with a feature by Frankie Power, popular first baseman of the team, assisted by his brother Leo.

Jimmie Foxx, Al Simmons and Mickey Cochrane of the Philadelphia Athletics have promised the committee that they would attend the banquet.

METALLIC SATINS NEWEST FOR EVENING MODE

Evening Coats Range From Jacket to Long Train

SILVER threads among the satin might well be the theme song of some of the lovely creations evolved by the couturiers for wear during the coming season.

Those who delight in the gleaming magnificence of lame, and the rich beauty of brocade, should be in their sartorial element, for such materials represent the last word from the ateliers of the designers here. Rich fabrics lend themselves admirably to the intricate cut and molded silhouette, that mark the new era of fashion, an era designed to allow woman to express her individuality through the medium of her wardrobe, but withal an era that bars the bizarre.

Evening coats this season are interesting, they range from the short jacket to the garment that trails its soft beauty even below the heel of the slipper. It was to be expected that many of the new coats would follow the irregular slightly trained hemline of the evening frock, and that like these frocks, the interest would be focussed on the back.

Monsieur Patou has presented one of the loveliest collections of the season, and as his ideas are always both original and supremely artistic, we hasten to send you a sketch of one of his most successful evening coats, that illustrates eloquently, the above mentioned new evening wrap silhouette. This coat is in a brilliant shade of plum chiffon velvet, a color predicted for popularity this winter. The back of this model is cut with an extremely wide circular movement and is so long that it literally trails on the ground. A loosely looped sash of velvet, starting low from each side seam, is caught across the soft folds at the back. Silver fox is used for the huge shawl collar, the cuffs and the all-round border.

We show also, Premet's very latest, and a most exciting gown that was enthusiastically received at the recent showing of that house. The fabric is a white brocade satin, shot with gleaming silver threads. The shoulder straps and flat appliqued bow are of strass. An amusing note is the tiny circular flounce that insists on being a part of the perfectly fitted bodice.

A KISS FOR CORRINA

By MAY CHRISTIE

CHAPTER 18

"There! That's better!" commented van Tuyl approvingly. "I'll get you another," and he took her glass from her.

Although Corinna's heart was heavy, a certain warmth began to creep slowly through her veins. She wouldn't be defeated. She'd show Malvey that even if he did flirt with this haughty girl who had been so rude to her. She didn't care . . . she wouldn't give Denise Van Wyck the satisfaction of seeing that she minded.

Van Tuyl was soon back with another concoction. He had evidently refreshed himself adequately on both trips to the bar.

He was smiling and gallant and debonair.

"Hello there!" Mortimer Crissell stood before them, his complexion rather florid, his eyes rather fuddled and a silly grin on his face. "Met you before, haven't I?" he said to Corinna.

Here was her chance to pull herself together and show the other laughing pair that she had some attraction. She wouldn't have been human if she hadn't seized this opportunity—before Denise and Malvey—to get a little of her own back.

So she laughed and talked with Mortimer and Jack Van Tuyl, sipping her second cocktail as though born to it.

Mortimer had seen Corinna twice before with Craig, and very much admired her. She was quite different from Denise in looks—not half so noticeable or flamboyant. He liked high spirits in a girl, and she had seemed—at the time of their brief introduction—rather too quiet.

But here in this gay setting with a cocktail in her hand and a flush on her gardenia-white cheeks she was much more vivacious than he had imagined.

Will you come with Van and me to the Jungle Club?" he invited her ingratiatingly.

Corinna had never visited the night club known as the Jungle.

"Where is it?"

Van Tuyl said, laughingly: "It's to be found everywhere where men like Mortimer pursue good-looking young females!"

Shut up, Van! Don't you understand that two's company and three's a crowd? What are you butting in for?"

As though he actually were the denizen of a jungle, Mortimer bellowed these words at the top of his voice.

Malvey swung round. He saw Corinna holding a half empty glass in her hand, her cheeks flaming with color.

Denise was annoyed that Mortimer and Jack Van Tuyl should make themselves so familiar with a girl who served her in a hairdressing parlor. She must stop it at once. Must make herself the center of attraction—as she always did. Must dispossess Corinna.

She put her hand on Malvey's arm, and drew him to the little group in the corner.

"What's going on here?" she smiled carefully, tilting up her chin, whose tip was delicately pointed, and looking down her nose through her heavily made-up lashes. "Some vulgar joke must be afoot since Mortimer's making such a hullabalooing!"

WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

WHEN Eve had taken one tiny bit of the apple, she passed it on to Adam. And he promptly devoured all the rest of it.

That should have taught woman a lesson; namely, that what's sauce for the goose is always apple-PIE for the gander. And that, whenever she "starts something," man is going to carry it right on to the finish.

Take "this freedom," for instance. Freedom of women had turned out to be God's greatest gift to men," wails the heroine of an anonymous novel.

Certainly, dear heart. It has given woman the right to "live her own life"—and the chance to discover that she can't do it without a man somewhere in the picture. It has given her the right to earn her own living, pay her own cab fare and climb down the chimney and fill her own Christmas stocking. (Oh, goody, goody, goody!)

It has given woman the right to wave a pay envelope in one hand and a divorce decree in the other; to throw her wedding-ring into the ash heap and trade in her old husband for a new model, whenever it suited her whim.

And, now, if you can judge by the tenor of all the new, popular novels, she is all armed, because the same law gives MAN the same right to scrap his old wife, and get a nice, fresh, young one, whenever the muffins are burned or the bacon isn't crisp enough, or a blonde crosses his path on a dark night.

Woman decided to treat love more casually and lightly. But no woman ever was born who could take love as casually and lightly or forget it as easily as a man can.

Woman decided to throw off the trammels of stiff and heavy clothing and to bare her backbone to the human eye and actinic rays. And, behold, along comes brave, nonchalant man and parades the streets in his pajamas and runs right into New York's swankiest hotels in his little bathrobes.

When woman broke the look on Mrs. Grundy's door, she had no idea that man would SPRING for the great wide open spaces, and leave her so far behind. But she should have known that the Lord or nature made him that way. She should have remembered Adam—and what he did to that apple.

In view of the new freedom the astonishing thing is not that there are so many wandering husbands in the world today, but that there are so many good and faithful ones! Man never had so much FREEDOM from responsibility, moral or financial or matrimonial, since the dawn of civilization!

TO CLEAR BLEMISHES

By MARIA JERITZA

FOR most of us, the good old summer-time is also vacation time, and September sees a great exodus back to the city and city tasks.

If your vacation was fully successful, it proved beneficial to your beauty and you returned clear-eyed, rested, with fresh color, clear skin and the lithe slenderness that marks a well-exercised, well-fed body.

It is very often true, however, that no one needs a vacation like the man—or woman—who has just had one. Many women use their vacations badly and return far more worn out than when they started, having tried to crowd a year's excitement and thrills into three weeks! Several weeks are seemingly needed, in many instances, to recuperate. The woman who returns pale and jaded from a vacation spent not wisely but too well, cannot do better than to give over the following month or longer to winning back her fresh, rested appearance as well as her clear color and bright eyes.

An extra hour of sleep every night will soon show its beneficial effect in smoothing out fatigue lines. Eliminate for a few weeks the card games or dances that were a nightly feature of a holiday that is much far from restful.

If you can afford it, this is the season when you must need the aid of a skilled beauty expert. Five or six treatments, say once each week, consisting of a thorough brushing and scalp massage, hot-oil shmapoo and wave, should lure back all its old-time luster and grooming to your hair.

If you cannot afford these beauty treatments, you can do the work for yourself. I sugest in that case a nightly brushing of about 50 strokes with a clean, long-bristled brush. Grasp the brush firmly and press it hard against your scalp. Brushing your hair will off your forehead and temples to stimulate circulation and hair-growth there, where the hair is likely to be thin. Brushing also distributes the oil evenly and so increases the lustre of the hair.

Next massage your scalp. Bracing your fingers with your thumbs, move them firmly in outward circles without bending the knuckles until your scalp has been well manipulated.

Now, for the shampoo: rub, into your scalp a tablespoonful of the best quality of olive oil, heated just comfortably warm. Leave it on half an hour, then wash the oil thoroughly out of your scalp. Use for rinse, two tablespoonfuls of cider vinegar added to a glassful of tepid water, rinsing it again in clear warm water.

I suggest a month or six weeks of this regime, before your indulge in your autumn permanent wave, for the better the condition of the hair, the better the wave takes.

Of course, every woman likes to keep her vacation tan as long as possible, but no one cares about a dry, unattractive complexion. To eliminate this condition, I suggest cleansing your face, neck and ears, for a time, with pure, bland sweet almond oil. Add to your bottle of almond oil a few drops of your favorite perfume.

You can continue the good effects of your vacation on your health and beauty, all the year while eliminating any unfortunate results, by giving sensible daily attention to your complexion, hair, nails and other details of grooming, and at the same time going in for a course in stage dancing or physical training in a good gymnasium, so as to get the active physical exercise every woman needs.

Bride Asks—For Advice

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been married almost one year—very happily, until another married woman came into my husband's life. I am twenty, my husband twenty-one. The other parties concerned are just about the same age. The other day, I was informed that my husband had been seeing this woman during the day, while I was out at home. I am employed as a stenographer and am also trying to keep a home successfully.

I questioned my husband regarding this affair and he readily admitted his guilt. My home being on the rocks, I decided to do my share. I found the woman and her husband, giving him full information, just as I had received it, thus successfully breaking up two homes. If such a thing happens once and the guilty party is forgiven, will it occur again? Can nobody be trusted in this day and age? Having a few debts, I am at a loss just which way to turn. What shall I do? Please inform me.

I have kept this matter from my parents, as it would grieve my mother to death. However, I have informed his sister and she and I saw the other woman. She tells me to hold my own, as I do not deserve such treatment. I have been a good wife and the second relents it. Thank you.

JUST A BROKEN-HEARTED WIFE.

I AM sorry you are in such trouble, my dear. Not knowing your husband, I cannot tell what his conduct will be in the future if he is forgiven this time. But I certainly would give him one more chance for the sake of your home and marriage.

If you forgive, decide to forget also, and do not think of him as a second wife. You can't possibly make a success of your marriage with that thought in mind.

Ask yourself whether you have done your part to prevent his interest from waning. Try to make yourself more attractive, your home inviting, and ask there worthwhile friends you and he share, to keep him amused and interested.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

When cleaning windows add a little vinegar to the water, and you will be astonished at the brilliant polish it produces.

Add one tablespoonful of peroxide of hydrogen to the water in which handkerchiefs are washed. This will keep them white and will also remove any fruit stains.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN.

Your wonderful column has been of great help to me, and now I come to you with some questions which I hope you won't think "queer."

1—When attending a theater, is it proper to thank the usher for the seat he has offered?

2—When attending with a gentleman, who tells the usher the location of seats?

3—Is it the gentleman's place to thank him? D. I. D.

THANK you—I'm glad that you find the column helpful. And indeed your questions aren't queer—they are ones that come to all of us, and always demand thinking.

1—Yes, this is the polite and gracious thing to do.

2—The gentleman.

A FEW FAVORITES

LOOKING over my files and wondering which of my recipes will interest you most, I've decided to give you a pot pourri today. A little of everything — sugar and spice and lots of things nice, starting with a lemon sponge pie that the friend who gave it to me years ago, guaranteed "would cull a hair" on bald heads.

LEMON SPONGE PIE

Mix together 1½ cups sugar, 3 tbsps. flour, and ½ tsp. salt. Add the grated rind and juice of 3 lemons, 3 egg yolks, 1 tbsp. melted butter, 2 cups milk, and last of all the beaten egg whites. Make in one crust (unbaked) from 35 to 40 minutes. All the materials should be ice cold.

STUFFED BAKED TOMATOES

Wash the tomatoes and cut off the stem ends. Do not peel, scoop out a little of the inside and chop this with a green pepper, a medium size onion and simmer in a tablespoon of butter until the pepper and onion is tender. Then add a cup of cold boiled rice or a cup of bread crumbs, salt and pepper to taste. Fill the tomatoes. Put a bit of butter on top of each and put in a buttered baking dish. These will take 20 to 30 minutes in a fairly hot oven.

MASHED POTATO CHOCOLATE CAKE

Cream a generous half-cup of shortening with two cups of sugar, and add three well-beaten eggs and a cup of hot, mashed potatoes. Sift two cups flour with four tsps. baking powder, one-half tsp. salt, one tsp. cinnamon, and the half of one grated nutmeg, and add these to the other ingredients, alternately, with one-half a cup of hot milk in which one square and one-half of grated chocolate has been dissolved. Bake in a large tube pan, or in two rather small loaf tins. This cake may molst for a long time—especially if frosted immediately—and has a delicious flavor.

Sincerely yours,
MARTHA LEE.

The Killer in Hunt for Rico

CHAPTER 31

THE Killer knocked at Rico's door but got no response. He knocked again and again, then, getting impatient, he put his shoulder to the door and flung it open. No Rico. The Killer stood in the hall, wondering where Rico could have gone. From the landing above him, the landlady yelled:

"Hey, wnat did you do to that door?"

"The hell with the door," said Pepi, "do you know where the guy that lives here is?"

"No," said the landlady, "but I seen him go out with a fellow?"

"What kind of a fellow?"

"A little fellow."

Otero! Killer took the stairs at a jump, but slowed his pace as he reached the main floor. There was a police car at the curb. Flaherty got out leisurely and stood talking to one of the policemen in the front seat. Pepi went over to him.

"Looking for the boss?"

"Yeah," said Flaherty, "the Big Boy sent me down. I want to have a talk with him."

"Yeah?" said Pepi. "Getting wise to yourself, huh?"

"Rico was always O. K. with me."

"That's the talk," said Pepi. "Well, the boss is upstairs by himself."

When Flaherty and one of his men had gone into the building, the Killer grinned at the others and walked slowly away, but, as soon as he had turned the corner, he broke into a run.

There were two kids sitting on the steps of the stairway that led up to Otero's. They made way for Pepi.

"Otero upstairs?" he asked.

One of the kids said:

"That funny little guy?"

"Yeah," said Pepi.

"I think I seen him go up."

"Yeah," said the other kid, "I seen him."

Pepi took the stairs at a run and rapped at Otero's door. Seal Skin opened it a few inches but Pepi pushed her aside and walked in. Otero was sitting with his feet on the bed, smoking a big cigar.

"Where's the boss?" asked Pepi.

"At Blondy's. What's the matter?"

"Joe squawked," said Pepi, "and the bulls is looking for Rico. Get your coat on and beat it, Otero. I'll go after the boss."

"Bulls looking for me too?"

"Sure," said Pepi, "it's the Court ency business. You beat it, Otero This ain't no picnic."

"No," said Otero, "I go with Rico

"You damn dummy," said Seal Skin.

"Yeah," said Pepi, "you beat it, Otero. Get out of town. They don't want me for nothing I'll see if I can't get Rico on the phone; if I can't I'll go after him. Listen, the bulls is over at Rico's right now"

"Caramba!" cried Otero, and, slipping his automatic into his coat pocket, he ran out into the hall and down the stairs.

"The damn dummy!" said Seal Skin.

Pepi stood looking at Seal Skin, then he said:

"Sure he's a damn dummy, but he's right."

Before Otero had gone half a block in the direction of Blondy's, he saw a police car coming toward him. He ducked into a drugstore It was empty except for a clerk who stood staring at Otero

"Show me the back way out, you!" said Otero.

"Say!" said the clerk

Otero took out his gun. The clerk threw himself down behind the counter. Otero ran out through the prescription room and found the back door, which opened into an alley. One end of the alley was blind, the other came out onto a busy street. Otero ran toward the open end.

All along the curbs on both sides of the street pushcarts were drawn up and pedlars were calling their wares. A slow-moving crowd blocked the pavements. Otero, because of his size, disappeared into the crowd, and, although he was forced to go slowly, he was safe from observation. Half a block from Blondy's he ducked down an alley, crossed a long cement court and climbed the fire-escape.

Blondy's bedroom window was locked. Otero beat on it with his fist For a moment there was no response, then he saw the bedroom door open slowly and Blondy's face appeared. She ran over and unlocked the window, then she turned and called:

"Rico, it's Otero."

Rico came into the bedroom. He had his hat on

"Did Pepi get you"

"No, what the hell"

The phone rang and Blondy went to answer it

They got Joe and he squawked, said Otero

Rico looked at him. Blondy came running back

"My God, Rico," she said, "the bulls're after you Joe squealed

"Borrowing money from my girl!"

"My girl!" Ann Marie repeated his words to herself as she ran down the stairs to meet the Goodwins. He said "my girl"! That meant that he had forgiven her and taken her back — and she was gloriously happy once again!

Jim was waiting in the vestibule for her, and through the lace door-curtains Ann Marie could see his car standing at the curb.

There was a girl in the back seat. She leaned forward eagerly when Jim and Ann Marie came out into the sunny street.

"My sister, Janet," Jim said, introducing her, "Janet, this is Ann Marie Macy. I have to call her 'Miss Macy' but she'll probably not mind if you call her 'Ann Marie'."

"I would love it! declared Ann Marie, settling herself on the soft velvet cushions of the great closed car with its shining windows and silver-and-crystal fittings.

Jim got in beside her.

"We're going to the Plaza," he said in his quiet pleasant way as the car slid away from the curb.

"The Plaza! . . . Ann Marie looked down at her shabby gloves, her shabbier handbag and her old blue dress that had been steamed and pressed times without number.

She looked at Janet Goodwin's black velvet suit that looked as if it were brand new. At the bunch of orange flowers that were pinned upon her young fine breast. At her immaculate cream-colored gloves. At the string of tiny seed-pearls around her neck.

"Jim makes me look like something out of a second-hand store," thought Ann Marie bitterly. "And I look worse than ever in a place like the Plaza!"

She began to wish that she had not come. She would come getting them today—and then all at once she forgot her discomfort and her shyness For Janet had begun to talk to her in the easiest friendliest way, and she laid one of her beautifully-plowed hands over Ann Marie's as she talked.

"Jim says you've come up here all alone" she said, "and I do think that's the bravest thing I ever heard of! To leave your home and your family and EVERYTHING just to come up here to study art! I think you're positively WONDERFUL."

She talked on and on in her young excited breathless voice, with her dark eyes snapping and her face aglow with nineteen-year-old interest and enthusiasm.

And Marie only half-listened to her. She leaned back in her seat enjoying the sight of the crowds of Fifth Avenue, the sunlight, the stir of Spring in the air and the warm comfort of being with two people who liked her and didn't mind showing it. Two people who had gone out of their way to be kind to her for no reason at all—except that they did like her.

The Plaza was too wonderful for words.

It took Ann Marie's breath away . . . The big dining room with its deep-piled carpet. The music playing softly. The velvety roses on every table. The beautifully dressed women and men supping and eating. The other crowd of dishes full of rich unfamiliar food Janet smiling and nodding at people here and there . . . Jim on the other side of their own table, with eyes only for Ann Marie.

"And now to business!" he said in a big-brotherly voice when lunch was over.

They got back into the car, dropped Janet at Forty-second st., and went on downtown to the advertising agency.

Up, up, up in a crowded elevator to the very top of a tall building they went. Then down a long hall to an office where many men and women were at work at flat-topped desks . . . Then into a smaller office where a generously-built handsome woman of middle age rose from a big shining mahogany desk to greet them.

"Miss Hogan, this is the young lady I've been telling you about," Jim said, and laid Ann Marie's package of her own pictures on the big shining desk. "I know you'll be able to find something for her to do. Something that she'll like to do—and something that will pay her well."

Miss Hogan flashed a smile at him from her bright gray eyes. She had a lovely smile and big square white teeth.

"And now I've got to be going," Jim said, turning to Ann Marie. "The car will be waiting downstairs for you."

A hard hand-grip, and he was gone.

At 4 o'clock Ann Marie came walking out of the building and she was looking on stars

She had a job and the promise of $30 a week salary to start with! Moreover, Miss Hogan had told her that she thought Ann Marie's little pictures of flappers in smart dresses were "adorable," she had said.

"They're different. They're not the same old stiff old style pictures we've been seeing in fashion-sheets for the past five years," she had told Ann Marie. "You be here tomorrow morning at 8:30, and I'll be here to start you off right!"

The sound of her own voice-like rich voice still sounded in Ann Marie's ears. . . . It seemed to her like the very voice of Success!

"And pretty soon I'll have enough money to get into some night class at some good art school," she thought as the great smooth-riding car bore her back to Susquehanna Hall. "God bless Jim Goodwin for all of it!"

The windows were open to the soft spring dusk. . . . Had she left them open, she wondered.

Then she saw that someone was in the room.

A slender plume of blue cigarette smoke rose from the end of the day-bed which had been dragged out of the dressing closet. From the other end swung a foot, and from the tip of that foot dangled a Turkish slipper. . . .

She knew that slipper! She knew whose slipper that was.

You ought to plugged that soffie, Rico. You ought to plugged him."

Rico stood in the middle of the room, staring. By an effort of the will, he got himself of an attitude of mind which had been growing on him since his interview with Montana and the Big Boy.

He was nobody, nobody. Worse than nobody. The bulls wanted him now and they wanted him bad Goodbye to fine cigars and crockery at on stand, goodbye swell food and Tux nes and security. Rico was nobody. Just a lonely Youngstown rugg that the bulls wanted. His face was ghastly

He swung his fist at the air.

"I ought to plugged him! I ought to plugged him!

"All right," said Rico, "let's go."

Blondy said:

"Take me, Rico"

Rico shook his head.

Nothing doing, Blondy. I'm traveling fast and I can't be bothered with no dame"

"Well, Rico," said Blondy, mab's to realize what had happened. "everything was going so nice."

"Sure," said Rico, "but it's all over now and that's that. You stay planted, Blondy, and as soon as I get a chance I'll send you a stake"

Otero crouted out the window into the fire escape and Rico followed him. Blondy began to scream.

"Shut your mouth," said Rico, "and if the bulls come up tell them was kid em along Make 'em think you got me hid, see"

"O K, Rico," said Blondy

CHAPTER 32

WITHOUT a word to anyone Ann Marie slipped out of the place and into the peace and quiet of her own flat across the hall.

It seemed very clean and orderly after the other room.

The fresh night wind made the curtains flutter in their baskets on the window sills

And when Ann Marie turned out the light the stars shone into the room very time the breeze blew back the window-curtains.

She lay in bed, her hands clasped behind her head, and thought about Neal and the girl who had kissed him that night.

"I wonder why I don't cry," she said to herself, and all at once she was asleep.

It seemed the next morning Ann Marie's alarm clock woke up and began to scream like a lost soul.

"Oh, shut up!" Ann Marie said aloud to it and got out of bed to turn it off.

"Do be still!"

She had had that alarm clock for more than two years and she had a friendly feeling for it now. It was the most dependable noisy little thing in the world.

It always got her up on time.

And this morning she wanted to get up on time. Time to shampoo her hair until it was bright and old gold. Time to manicure her nails and press her dark-blue dress.

She wanted to make a good impression on Jim's sister. And knowing Jim as she did, she could imagine that his sister would be pretty. She would be dressed very quietly and well, and her skin and hair would be freshly shampooed. She might not be beautiful but she would be attractive and friendly and nice. . . . That is, if she was anything like Jim.

"How well he had behaved himself last night, she thought, when Neal had raved and ranted at him. The difference in the two men struck her all at once, as she got up and began to make coffee on her tiny electric plate.

"Neal's just a spoiled boy, sometimes," she said to herself. "He doesn't think about anything but his own pleasure—his own good time."

And still she knew that she loved him, in spite of the things about him that she didn't like or understand.

At 10 o'clock she unlocked the door of his apartment with the key that he had given her and peeped in.

He was still asleep evidently. The door of the tiny dressing closet was closed.

So were all of the windows of the studio. And the air was so thick with the odor of stale cigarette smoke and drunken perfume and "loud" perfume that it made her sick as she crossed the big room and flung up the sashes of all three windows.

Then she set to work to put the place into some kind of order.

For almost two hours she worked washing glasses and plate. Emptying cigarette stubs into the grate and setting fire to them with an old newspaper. Sweeping the rugs. Beating the flattened cushions of the couch. Mopping up the hearth where a glass had been broken. Getting Neal's breakfast ready.

At half past eleven she heard him running water into his bathtub.

At five minutes to 12 he came walking out of the big room. He had the fresh pink look that always follows a bath and a shave, and he looked more like Lory Byron than ever with the collar of his clean white shirt turned down. Over his clothes he wore a dark blue silk house-coat, and he had on blue leather bedroom slippers.

"Hello. How's my only sweetheart this morning?" he asked, and put his arms around Ann Marie as she stood at the little table pouring out his first cup of coffee.

She turned in his arms and looked at him. "Your only sweetheart?" she mocked him. "Hardly that, Neal. You seem to have as many sweethearts as a sailor."

She was hurt and jealous, and she wanted him to know it. She pulled herself gently away from him and set his glass of orange juice on the table.

"I didn't boil any eggs for you this morning," she said quietly. "I knew you wouldn't want a big breakfast when you are going to have lunch with the Goodwins at one."

He shook his head. "Lunch with the Goodwins" he repeated, giving her a hard angry look. "I certainly am not going to have lunch with the Goodwins, today or at any other time."

"Well, I'm supposed to—" Ann Marie was beginning when he stopped her.

"All right. Go ahead!" he said irritably. "Run around with them all you want to! Only don't expect me to have anything to do with you, if you do! I watched you and Jim Goodwin last night!"

"And I watched you, too—with that Tillie woman!" Ann Marie came back at him. "Dancing with her as if you two were the Clamaze twins! Kissing her —"

"All right, all right!" he cut in again. "If you don't like it you know what to do! You're not married to me, you known!"

If he had slapped her across the face Ann Marie couldn't have been more stunned and hurt.

"You mean you're through with me?" she asked, feeling as though her heart would burst. "You don't care about me any more?"

He picked up his glass of orange juice, drained it and set it down again.

"Well, to tell the truth, I'm not very crazy about you in your present mood," he said bluntly. "I've always been a free agent and it's my goat to have you keep tabs on me!"

He drank the coffee she had made for him and picked up the morning paper.

"And you'd like to be a free agent again?" Ann Marie asked in a strangled voice. "You're tired of being engaged to me, aren't you?"

He did not answer.

Ann Marie stood looking down at him for a moment more, and then went downstairs to the car.

She closed the door of it behind her, feeling exactly as if she were closing the door on all of her happiness.

Oh, what a fool she had been to think she could make him just by coming here and taking care of him! What a fool she had been to think of marrying a man like him!

A man so good-looking that no woman would ever let him alone. So wild about women, himself, that he never would tie himself down to one.

"I knew what he was like, right from the start," she told herself, thinking it all out in the quiet of her own little apartment, "and I should have put him out of my mind then."

But when she opened the door Neal stood outside in the dim little hallway. He was laughing and he held a pair of his trousers in his hands.

"Sore at me?" he asked.

For an instant Ann Marie was too amazed to answer him.

Then she said—she was angry with me!" she said finally.

She could hardly believe that he was not angry with her still. Why, not an hour ago he had told her by his silence that he was through with her. That he wanted to be what he called a "free agent" again. . . . And he was now behaving as if nothing very much had happened!

"Well, if we're friends, I was going to ask you to do me a favor," he said to her, still in that half-laughing way. "I was going to ask you if you would press this pair of trousers for me."

Now, Ann Marie had never pressed a pair of trousers in her life. But she had seen Mrs. Lorpress trousers for her father and Howdy many a time. And she had a small electric iron in her little make-believe kitchen.

"All right. Give them to me, she said. She took them.

But as she did it, a bell rang in the room behind her, and she knew that the Goodwins had her.

"That must be Jim ringing the bell in the vestibule," she said, wondering what to do now. "I—I ought to go to lunch with him and his sister, Neal. He's trying to be nice to me. He's going to take me to some people who may give me a job. And you know it was you who asked Jim to help me out."

He took the trousers out of her hand.

"You won't have time to do these," he added. "I'd have the tailor down the street press them, but I owe him so much now that I'm steering clear of him . . . Goodbye, have a good time."

He drew her close to him and kissed her.

"Hurry back," he said.

She was half-way down the stairs when he called her back to him.

He was still holding the trousers in his hand—and she saw them first at them and then at her with an odd little twisted smile on his face.

"Sweetheart, I've got to have these pressed," he said, "and I'm flatter than linoleum. My mother usually sends me a check about this time of month. . . . Could you let me take a fiver?"

The words were not out of his mouth before Ann Marie had a ten-dollar bill out of her shabby little bag and into his outstretched hand.

"Good lord, I never thought I'd come to this!" he groaned in a comical sort of way as he took it.

"Borrowing money from my girl!"

"My girl!" Ann Marie repeated his words to herself as she ran down the stairs to meet the Goodwins. He said "my girl"! That meant that he had forgiven her and taken her back — and she was gloriously happy once again!

The Message in Her Palm -:- By Demma Ray Oldham

OLEANDA'S dark eyes sparkled

"Here it is," she said breathlessly, listening intently to the dark, jolly lady with the red silk handkerchief wrapped softly about her head.

"How hold se coin tight in your hands while you make a good wish; it will all come to pass for nice ladies!"

Oleanda pressed the coin between her hands and closed her eyes; then meditated, while she made her wish. Then the gypsy, taking the coin, doubly assured her that it would "surely come to pass."

"What's 50 cents extra?" Oleanda whispered to herself, "when my wish will come true!" and she marvelled at the thought of knowing the future for one, a dollar, and the assurance that her wish would come true for 50 cents extra.

On her way home, Oleanda was thinking of Marie, her office pal, who didn't believe in palmistry. She would make Marie's eyes bulge with excitement next day when she could get a chance to tell her how the gypsy described her past, unbelievably perfect!

But the wish . . . and it would come true. She had wished to meet her future husband before night. The Gypsy had described him as tall, slender, dark eyes and very dark hair.

Oleanda watched every man she passed as she hurried down the street. She had never seen so many blondes before. She looked at her watch; it was exactly 6. Everybody in that little town came to the postoffice at 6.

When she walked through the door at the postoffice she saw a dear man standing back in the corner reading a letter. "Oh, there he is!" she murmured to herself . . . but how could she meet him? She stood for a moment watching him. He never looked up. She dropped her package on the floor and even this failed to attract his attention.

"Have you the time, sir?"

"No," he gruffly replied, and went on reading.

Of course he wasn't the one; he was low and fat. How could she have been so stupid! Her lover was to be tall and slender. She hurried on home, her cheeks burning at her own stupidity.

As she turned the corner round the old theater, her heart almost quit beating! She stopped still grabbed her throat with one hand, while her purse dropped to the walk. A tall, slender, good-looking cigarette almost ran into her.

"Excuse me! I didn't mean to frighten you. My mind was a thousand miles away. We came darn near having a collision, didn't we?" He was looking straight into her face, smiling.

"Mine wasn't," piped Oleanda, "I was looking right at you . . . I was . . . hunting for you!"

"For me? A good-looking girl hunting for me?"

"Well . . . yes . . . I suppose so." And they strolled down the walk together.

"Where do you live?"

Now she knew he was interested. She blocks east from the next corner. It isn't far; just a nice walk."

Her voice was almost pleading, and her countenance lit up with new hope when he asked:

"May I stick along?"

"Surely!" Every inch of her body was thrilled with joy. "I'd be ever so happy . . . . and what's your name?"

"Overby Evans," he smiled, and "what's yours?"

"Overby Evans!" she gasped, "why that's the very initials . . . O. E." Then she suddenly covered her mouth with her hand, "Oh, you asked me MY NAME . . . . well, it's Oleanda Harland."

When they reached the door he held her hands. She was simply charming, as he looked straight into her face and in a low voice asked: "How about a date tonight?"

The light faded from her eyes and she looked at the floor. Her best dress . . . was thinking, had been sent to the cleansers and wouldn't be back until tomorrow, and Betty Gray had borrowed the pink one.

Tomorrow night would be better; then she would have time to get to the beauty parlor and get a marcel and manicure. Then with her best dress on, she would look keen! She had already won him and she must not lose him. She lifted her dark eyes to his, leaned closer against his strong arm and asked:

"How about tomorrow night?"

"Make it tonight," he insisted.

"Why?"

"My wife'll be here tomorrow night. We're putting on a play at the theater. She's my leading lady. I came on ahead to make some arrangements. You'll have to make it tonight," he begged.

Oleanda chilled. Her trembling knees could hardly hold her up. She staggered and caught hold of the door knob. As her heart beat high and her eyes glistened, she gasped:

"And—you're—you're—married?"

But before he had time to answer she dashed inside and shut the door in his face.

Next day at the office, Marie confided: "Kid, let's go down after work and save our palms read. I've decided I want to try it once!"

HUNTING AIDS IN SALE OF FIREARMS

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

As the "open season" starts on various varieties of game, the sale of firearms is aided. One big New York listed sporting goods company declares: "The arms industry seems to be continuing expansion, with the undeveloped field for sporting arms large. In the 1927-28 season hunting licenses issued exceeded all previous figures, including more than 6,450,000. In the preceding season the number was 5,987,305, and in the season 1925-26 it was 5,168,353

"Increasing population does not necessarily mean a lessening of hunting activities. The condition in England bears witness to this. There, while the population is much greater per square mile, per capital consumption of ammunition is much greater than in the United States. In Great Britain practically all game is artificially raised, while here very little is. There are movements on foot, however, to increase game breeding here."

As announced in this column yesterday, President Victor M Cutter of the United Fruit Co. sails on the Mauretania tomorrow for Europe. There he will further plans for additional development of foreign markets. President Cutter was the first outstanding New England leader to call for development of foreign trade, which is now rather newly deemed of outstanding importance by captains of industry in general. President Cutter's idea was taken up and developed by our major corporations to an extent which is only partly appreciated but emphasized by nearly every new report of progress made public from time to time regarding our foreign trade.

All the "foreign trade" we have gained is not evident in the corporation reports, since scores of American corporations now operate abroad through subsidiaries. This fact shows that foreign "tariff bars" in many lines are not as effective as some would have us believe. Credit should also be given another New Englander, Dr Julius Klein of Cambridge, assistant secretary of Commerce, for his work in bestirring the trade leaders to go after foreign markets.

National bounty Co. states that within 30 seconds it paid $300,000 loss suffered by R. V. Hiscoe & Co., New York broker, in theft of securities last Friday. This is a speedier record by far than we ever heard was set in settling company automobile insurance claims.

Treasurer Ernest N. Hood of Naumkeag Steam Cotton Co. states, relative to the company's business: "This is an intermediate period and no figures are available, but the summer months are the dull period of the year. Business will up quite well, and sales were ahead of a year ago. Present conditions are satisfactory and final quarter promises well."

It is extremely unusual for a recognized stock exchange to acquire its services as a public bureau. It is therefore of more than usual interest to note that the New York Cotton Exchange has taken over the Garside Cotton Service, informational cotton trade service, and has engaged Joseph H. Garside, its director, as economist of the exchange, effective October 1. The exchange will continue the service in its own name, under direction of Mr. Garside, with extension of reports on the cotton crops, which will be transferred to other hands.

Cotton crop forecasters cannot be proven to have done remarkably well, on the whole, in recent years. Conflicts in opinion, both government and private, have been of more aid to the speculators than to the allied industries.

Effects of the New England "oil war" remain to be seen when earnings statements of the major companies appear later in the year.

PLANS for formation of a $60,000,000 corporation which would unite Vick Chemical Co. and Sharpe & Dohme, Inc., under discussion.

Prosperity's Pace Still Vigorous, Forbes Finds

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, Sept. 24—Stock market "average quotations" soared to a new high peak last week and closed with a moderate gain, despite many violent ups and downs among animated issues.

The swiftness of declines in favorite speculative shares aroused unsteadiness in Wall Street.

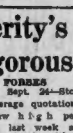
Meanwhile America's prosperity is gratifyingly well maintained as the third quarter of the year ends.



B. C. Forbes

Always is so vast a continent, embracing as many diverse activities and natural resources, there are uneven conditions. There are weak spots today. For example, our long-sustained construction boom has manifested itself some of late years. The automobile industry has not done relatively as well during the last six months as it did during the earlier part of the year. Ordering of steel has diminished, at least temporarily. The oil industry is still chaotic.

Agricultural prices lost ground last week and the general commodity level has been sagging a little.

On the whole, however, activity is far above normal, figuring the average of recent years as normal. Our railroads are carrying record-breaking tonnage. Bank clearings—now a less dependable yardstick—show very substantial increase. Consumption of electric power is substantially ahead of last year. Imports, doubtless swelled to some extent by tariff precautions, are in very heavy volume, with our exports also making a very satisfactory showing.

Best of all, the latest employment reports are most encouraging. All authorities of standing seem to agree that more workers are employed than even a year ago, when things were lively, and the increase in the nation's total pay envelope is quite notable. Indeed the employment situation appears to be better than at any time in recent years.

It is not, perhaps, astonishing that the stock market should reflect these conditions by rising to new heights in spite of rapidly-mounting brokers' loans. But the normal charge of 9 per cent for time funds and 7 to 10 per cent call money.

Instead of daring exploits by powerful individual operators, Wall Street now talks mostly of the colossal operations of our 500 variegated investment trusts. They, we are assured, are mainly responsible for the advances in the average prices of good stocks to dizzy heights never imagined in other days. It is a lean week which does not bring the flotation of several new projects classified as investment trusts, and some of them are large—more than $50,000,000 to $100,000,000.

Unquestionably, this pouring in of hundreds of millions of dollars—two billions so far this year—into the hands of financial firms for stock purchases on account of individuals, have been absorbing choice shares that the floating supply of genuine investments unprecedentedly depleted. Admittedly, the supply of new funds for investment has not been increasing as rapidly as the issuance of new stocks by our leading corporations.

But "scarcity value" is utterly valueless to the out-and-out investor. It is even worse than valueless, it is a drawback, a handicap, a cost. What it amounts to is that, because of the diminished available supply, the investor has to pay more. And, of course, "scarcity value" adds not one iota to any corporation's ability to increase its profits.

Here we have a consideration which heretofore apparently has been entirely overlooked.

My guess is that neither time money nor demand money will go appreciably higher, but that within a few weeks the trend will be the other way. Sterling having dropped to the low level of the year, additional gold exports are likely regardless of any "understanding" agreed upon at New York and London banking interests.

But whether easier money will prove sufficient in itself to keep the speculative boom going merrily on much longer is a question which there is room for quite starkly different opinions that keep betting on horse races and speculation in stocks going.

LISTENING IN ON THE RADIO

By BERT BROCKBANK
Radio Editor

THERE'S nothing new under the sun. Now we are told that radio was predicted hundreds of years before Christ walked on earth. Bible students refer to Job 38:35 as proof. This verse states, "Canst thou send lightnings that they may go and say unto thee: 'Here we are?'" "Sending lightnings" is interpreted to mean emanations or vibrations. Again in Job 38:7 it says, "When the morning stars sang together," and in Psalms 68:6 it is stated, "Thou makest the outgoings of the morning and evening to rejoice." Dr. Paul Rader and other Bible students declare that the word "outgoings" was the best Hebraic synonym for the modern phrase, "carrier wave." Next!

The story of a pilot's daring combat with a tribe of snake worshippers in faraway Singapore . . . exciting drama in the jungle wilds . . . the wild beat of tom-toms . . . splendors of mystic temples . . . Oriental mystery, fanaticism and intrigue. Such is the ballyhoo for tonight's Flying Stories program to be heard through WNAC and associated Columbia stations. Terry O'Connell, ex-air ace of the World War, and his daring rescue of a kidnaped girl will be vividly portrayed in "Above Jungle Clouds."

A SHIP built entirely of iron, with no superstructure but a tiny turret, carrying only two guns . . . it would be preposterous to send such a freak against the Confederate battleship Merrimac. So thought the Union naval board. But the shrewd advice of President Lincoln triumphed and the Monitor, called the "cheese box on a raft," was sent into Hampton Roads. The Merrimac was cast upon it. Both ships survived under furious cannonading. It was a bloodless battle without a victor, but it spelled the doom of wooden warships. The complete story of the Monitor will be told in dramatic form in tonight's Socony-land Sketch from WEEI.

Perhaps you have noticed that the much-abused "there will now be a brief pause for station announcement" is missing from this week's daytime programs of the National Broadcasting Co. It fits place in a musical note. The "brief pause" phrase was used by some stations on the networks to make their own station announcements. The musical note serves the same purpose and is infinitely more pleasing to the listener. Here's hoping that its use becomes general.

WOLF SCARPIOFF, the "Russian Boy Wonder," is to sing in the Fada programs, to be broadcast by the Columbia system through WNAC tonight. He is billed as William Robyn, well known to the radio audiences as "Wee Willie" of Roxy's gang. It is not as many years ago that he was the "boy wonder." Robyn toured the country following his success in "his amateur night" and was the rage in the theaters of the East. He managed to average three dollars an evening in this way and in the daytime he studied voice and languages under his discoverer, Jerome Hayz, who was enthused over the lad that he taught him without fee and gave him an allowance.

The adventures of Dorothy Brent, pretty secretary, and Jimmy Otis, reporter approach a near "showdown" in the episode which the Johnson and Johnson program will feature this evening through WBZ. The underworld chieftain who kidnaped Dorothy, attempts to frame her as a jewel thief and threatens her if she does not help him. Jimmy otherwise elects to remain and settle her score with the gang leader. A musical background will accompany the story will be played by an orchestra directed by Gene Rodemich.

Young Judea Dance to Aid Palestine

A benefit dance for the Palestine Emergency Fund will be held at Beth El Auditorium, corner of Bradshaw and Glenway sts., Dorchester, Wednesday evening under the auspices of the Senior Clubs of Young Judea. Art Smith has agreed to furnish his orchestra music for the occasion.

Ruby Koenig

Alienists to Try Mexican Criminals

Mexico City, Sept. 24 (AP)—Trial of criminals by examinations of alienists and other experts, instead of by the old jury system, will fill under Mexico's new penal code the modern need for more practical justice, President Portes Gil told the correspondent of Universal.

The new codes promulgated under the extraordinary powers given to the President by Congress will become effective before the term is ended in February.

FRENCH LINE'S PLANES TO LAND MAIL IN HUB

Service to Continue Until December; Boston Route Saves 28 Hours

By GEORGE W. HAMBLIN

Boston has been chosen for the port of entry for the air mail seaplanes catapulted from the decks of French Line ocean vessels, it was announced following a flight from the Ile de France 250 miles off Boston.

Joseph E. Baggs, general agent for the French Lines in Boston, stated that the catapulting of the seaplanes from the decks of the company's vessels and the shipping of the mail aboard the Colonial system to New York will save 28 hours in the delivery of the mail to American addressees. The flights will be continued until about December 1 and then be halted until next March.

With a mail load of nine pounds, Pilot Leon Domergue and a radio operator climbed into their Cams seaplane powered with a 450-horsepower Lorraine engine and were shot off the deck of the Ile de France while passengers cheered. The takeoff was aided by a tail wind.

Domergue taxied up to the Airvia float off the airport building, where he was met by officials of the French Line, custom inspectors, immigration and quarantine inspectors, and the French Boston Chamber of Commerce and newspapermen. Bill Caughlan of the Boston Speedplane Co. furnished the transportation from the South Station landing to the float.

After officially clearing the port the party was whisked across the harbor in two of Caughlan's water jumpers.

The choice of Boston as the terminal of the seaplane air mail service is another step forward for the Hub in the air maps and air trails of the world. Considerable time is to be saved by sending the ships here rather than to New York.

The last of the Canucks, powered with an OX-5, made its appearance at the airport. It was piloted from Pittsburgh by E. C. Williams, owner, accompanied by Andrew Jones. Williams has a gas tank holding fifty gallons, and goes barging around the country to his heart's content.

FOOD LECTURES BY MRS. CROSS OPEN MONDAY

Evening American-Sunday Advertiser Cooking Classes Stir the Hub Housewives

Announcement of the coming of Mrs. Lilla P. Cross to assist Martha Lee is conducting the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser free cooking school next week at the Hotel Statler, has met with enthusiastic response from housewives of Boston and neighboring localities.

Regardless of how long a wife or mother has been running a

In this instance Evening American-Sunday Advertiser feels this is amply justified in having these special lectures will bring to the women of Greater Boston. It will include kitchen and housekeeping procedure, marketing economies, variety in menu planning and methods of saving time for social life and recreation so often made secondary by self-sacrificing women.

Sessions to be held next week, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons at the Hotel Statler, will be free of any admission charge and no tickets will be required. Everybody is invited, with no obligation to anyone.

BENEFITS TO WOMEN

The far-reaching benefits of such a course of lectures by so notable an authority as Mrs. Lilla P. Cross makes the cooking school an especially worthwhile event. Mrs. Cross will deal with such topics as marketing, budgeting, child-feeding, diets for fat and lean, menu planning, time and labor-saving appliances, and, also, that equally important angle of modern housekeeping—charm and beauty in home appointments.

Housekeepers are entitled to receive practical information from a lecturer of mature experience. That is just what Mrs. Lillian P. Cross is to give the Evening American-Sunday Advertiser free cooking school proposes to bring to Greater Boston.

The fascinating personality of Mrs. Cross, supplemented by a refreshing humor, will make the sessions interesting as well as educational and helpful.

Martha Lee is assisted by Mrs. Cross finds problems of housekeeping pretty much the same the country over. Therefore it is a matter of aiding cheerfulness to the kitchen through colorful appointments and efficiency. It is a conscientious effort to use a worn out appliance that saps strength and protect a good utensil to use than is fair to the family budget.

The daily contact with food and equipment problems of hundreds of housewives gives Mrs. Cross an expert advisory capacity.

GET YOUR PROBLEMS READY

The cooking school will be immediately more helpful if some advance preparation is made in the way of jotting down questions for explanation from the platform by Mrs. Cross. It may be a matter of proper dining room appointments in silver, linens, china or the newer and very fascinating tinted glassware. Or possibly there is a problem in child feeding, or diets for those of the family who need to reduce or to put on weight. The discussions of food values for children and for adults is a most valuable feature of cooking school talks.

Blanks will be provided at the hall on which questions may be asked, and Mrs. Lilla P. Cross will devote time to answering inquiries concerning cookery and any phase of home economics.

With the knowledge that the cooking school is definitely performing this sort of helpful service to those in attendance, the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser confidently and gladly offers this contribution to the home life of Greater Boston.

Alienists to Try Mexican Criminals

Mexico City, Sept. 24 (AP)—Trial of criminals by examinations of alienists and other experts, instead of by the old jury system, will fill under Mexico's new penal code the modern need for more practical justice, President Portes Gil told the correspondent of Universal.

The new codes promulgated under the extraordinary powers given to the President by Congress will become effective before the term is ended in February.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Willing to Die in Cause of Aviation

Editor Boston American:

I have just finished reading the letter of F. B. A. of Sharon in regards to people trying to stop others from going up in airplanes.

I heartily agree with F. B. A. I am taking a course in aviation and figure that if I am ever killed in an airplane accident that it will be for a good cause. I am only 17 and believe that any boy that age should take an interest in aviation.

There is no sense in being afraid to go up in an airplane, because we all have to die some way, so why not live and die for aviation?

Yours for bigger and better airplanes.

Put Pigeons on Probation, He Says

Editor Boston American:

In your issue of today I read in your "Letters from Readers" column, that the Boston Common pigeons are becoming real pests, according to E. T. C.'s story of a holdup by them.

Being interested in the science of life, I can state that the Boston Common pigeons are not responsible for this said hold-up, but the real culprits are the human pigeons. The parents of all our domesticated animals were, of course, originally wild in disposition.

I have noticed in some of our Worcester city hall pigeons the reversion to the condition of a savage ancestor. Many of Mayor O'Hara's pigeons will not even feed out of my hand, and are never a plague when they see one carrying a bundle. When two individuals have delverged from a common parent are mated, there is a tendency in their offspring to take on the features of that stock that may have been absent for a number of generations.

I would suggest that the Boston Common "holdups" be placed on probation.

Stenographer Better Speller Than Boss

Editor Boston American:

We girls, who are stenographers, had a discussion over our experiences in spelling English words. The discussion took this shape: Who is the better speller, the boss or his stenographer?

We all told what experience we had and came to the conclusion that bosses expect their stenographers to be a Webster's dictionary on two feet.

The fact is that the average business man knows very little of spelling. This is upon the evidence of your women stenographers. I would like to hear this brought out in your "Letters to the Editor" column.

Keep to the Right Crossing Streets

Editor Boston American:

Why don't people keep to the right in crossing Boston streets? If they would it would be so much easier to get across. The average person sometimes goes zig-zag. Then he goes at right angles. You take Washington and Summer sts. at the crossing. Watch the people and you will find that very few keep to the right in crossing. Women are great offenders in this respect. But the men can take very little credit to themselves, either. One of you read in local papers tion in Boston streets, keep to the right in crossing.

RIGHT TURN.

Wants American to Fight Insurance

Editor Boston American:

It looks as though we'll have to depend on the American as usual to carry on the right kind of publicity in the auto insurance fight. Other papers seem to report the hearings without any show of condemnation. Either we have business of legalized holdup, always with a tone of sarcasm of toleration or indifference, efforts and simple solution.

Can we ask the American to start a campaign of hard knocks hammering to repeal the law before another year gets under way and the interests behind all this has the chance to stall along for another year

Majestic Maid Greets Stars

Aileen Huddlestone — Majestic Mystery Maid — Erminie Callaway
E. H. McCarthy — Jerome Rutherford

The Majestic Mystery Maid entertains Erminie Callaway, "Texas Tomboy" and Majestic broadcasting star, and Aileen Huddlestone, concert entertainer. With them are executives of the Grigsby-Grunow Co., makers of Majestic radio sets. Below is shown the Majestic Mystery Maid giving Charles Murray, screen star, some entertainment with a Majestic.

Impetus was given today to the Miss Majestic popularity contest by the activities of screen and radio stars who are in the city and have found the contest of intense interest.

Charles Murray, who is appearing in person at the Keith-Albee Theater, was among the early visitors at the contest headquarters at 224 Tremont st., and he spent several hours greeting contestants who visited the headquarters.

A Majestic owner himself, Mr. Murray was most enthusiastic about the contest and assured the entrants that those who win Majestic radios in the contest are going to have a prized possession with unlimited entertainment possibilities.

Among the visitors, also, were Erminie Callaway, "The Texas Tomboy," who is a featured star in the weekly broadcasts of the Majestic Theater of the Air, and Aileen Huddlestone, another noted radio and concert entertainer.

Both of these young ladies have been engaged especially for appearances in Boston for the Miss Majestic Popularity Contest. They are to be heard in a special broadcast at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon through Station WNAC. In the same hour will also be featured a special Miss Majestic Popularity Contest announcement of interest to all who have entered the contest or are contemplating entering.

"Why Can't You Love That Way?" "It's Nice Like This," "What'd You Want to Make Me Love You For?" "Do Something," "When We Get Together in the Moonlight," "Romance in Songs."

Miss Huddlestone will present numbers including: "Sweet Phyllis," "Only a Rose," "Indian Love Call."

Already an assured success, the Miss Majestic Popularity Contest took an even greater hold on the public fancy with the announcement that free airplane rides will be given to 20 of the contestants chosen by lot from among those whose entries in the contest are received before midnight tonight. The lucky winners of airplane rides will be guests of Grigsby-Grunow Co., manufacturers of Majestic radio, and sponsors of the Miss Majestic Popularity Contest, in sightseeing trips from the Boston Airport on next Sunday, being taken for an extended air tour of the North and South Shores and of Metropolitan Boston.

The airplane rides, as an incidental prize, have attracted attention second only to that attracted by the main prizes in the contest itself. The first prize winner in the contest is to be given a Model 92 Majestic radio and Phonograph Combination, a round trip to Bermuda for herself and companion, with all expenses paid, and also a complete sports ensemble from the Barbara Stone Shops of Boston.

Second prize winner is to be given a Model 91 Majestic radio and a complete sports ensemble while the third prize winner will receive a Majestic Model 81 radio and an Elgin white gold studded wrist watch. Seven additional prizes have also been announced and others will be added from time to time as the contest progresses.

Voting coupons may be obtained by filling the nomination coupons which are printed in the daily papers and count for 1000 votes each. Other coupons printed in the daily newspapers count for 50 votes each.

A courtesy coupon given to present Majestic owners is good for 500 votes. Registration coupons distributed free at contest headquarters, 224 Tremont st. opposite the Majestic Theater, are good for 300 votes. Additional coupons good for as high as 15,000 votes each, are distributed through Majestic Radio dealers, co-operating in the contest.

Vote coupons good for 300 votes each are also being given to all purchasers of admission tickets for the show "The Cock-Eyed World" at the B. F. Keith Theater and at the Keith-Albee Theater, where Charles Murray is appearing in person, and Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor are appearing in the picture, "Lucky Star." Ballot boxes for the reception of contest ballots are conveniently located in the lobbies of both theaters.

Edward H. McCarthy, Grigsby-Grunow Co. executive, in charge of the Miss Majestic Contest, reports that Boston has responded to the contest announcement with enthusiasm exceeding that of any other city in which similar contests have been conducted. He predicts that the winning contestants will amass a vote total in excess of that achieved in any other city. He attributes the interest in the contest, not only to the enthusiastic co-operation of the Majestic dealers but also to the unusual and amazingly valuable prizes which will be awarded to the winners.

More Safety for Fliers

Reliable Weather Information Over Air Routes Essential to Pilots

If the Federal Government is to do its full duty in the promotion of aviation throughout the United States it must immediately provide better weather forecasting facilities for airplanes.

Long ago the War and Navy Departments faced the fact that reliable information about weather conditions over flying routes was essential to protect the lives of the pilots of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps. As a result efficient meteorological service has long been at the disposal of the pilots who fly the colors.

But lack of funds has prevented the United States Weather Bureau from extending its adequate weather service to the southwest, where many violent storms originate. It was in New Mexico, unserved today by adequate weather forecasting facilities, that the transcontinental plane City of San Francisco crashed in a storm with a loss of eight lives.

It is true that transcontinental air lines maintain weather stations of their own to warn of approaching storms, but this service can and ought to be greatly improved by the assistance of the Federal Government.

Investigation shows that an additional appropriation of only $1,500,000 annually would provide a nation-wide weather service for airplanes. Such a service, experience proves, would greatly reduce the danger of airplane disasters due to unforeseen weather conditions.

With the limited funds at its disposal the Weather Bureau has done the best it could, but without additional funds it cannot cover all the airplane routes now in operation with efficient weather forecasting service.

Only about half the country is served today by the aerological division which Congress created three years ago as an addition to the Weather Bureau. The 200 stations now maintained should be immediately increased so that the service they provide can be extended to all airway routes over which either mail or passenger planes fly.

Since the Weather Bureau established a 24-hour service on the Cleveland-New York air route not an accident has occurred for which weather conditions were to blame. Yet this route, which takes planes over the Alleghany Mountains, is considered one of the most difficult between the two oceans.

The truth is that the development of air transport in this country has caught the Federal Government napping. It should wake up to that fact and Congress should cheerfully appropriate the comparatively small sum necessary to provide the best possible weather forecasting facilities for every air passenger line now in operation.

That is the least that the Federal Government can do to protect the lives of all who travel by air. And that little ought to be done without delay.

Illiteracy Menaces Nation

One of the most dangerous of all "the foes of our own household" has been for a long time and is today the extent of illiteracy throughout this country.

Illiteracy is not only a national menace—it is a national disgrace.

According to the census of 1910 there were 5,500,000 persons in this country ten years of age who could not read or write either in English or in any other language.

There were, in addition, 3,500,000 persons who could not speak or write English.

And these appalling statistics put the United States in ninth place among the nations at the time of the Great War. Almost all of the civilized world stood above us.

During the Great War the report of the surgeon-general of the Army showed that of the men called to the colors between the ages of twenty-one and thirty-one, nearly 25 per cent were found to be practically illiterate.

And illiteracy seriously impaired the national defense, because one-fourth of those called to defend the colors could not even understand the orders given them in war.

And in peace these illiterates jeopardized the security of this country. Because as voters they could not read the ballots they cast. They were compelled to vote the way they were told to vote.

Franklin K. Lane, while Secretary of the Interior, during the Great War, estimated the annual economic loss to the nation because of illiteracy at $825,000,000.

Illiteracy has been shown by investigation to be responsible for one-half of the industrial accidents in this country every year.

Senator Capper, of Kansas, has reintroduced in the Senate a declaration of war against illiteracy in the form of the same education bill which was supported so strongly by President Coolidge and is championed today by most of the public educators of the country.

This bill creates a Department of Education with the Secretary of Education in the President's Cabinet.

The President and the Congress should unite with the several States in a country-wide warfare on the real foe of illiteracy.

And one way to make this warfare effective is for the Federal Government to go to the support of education in the several States by establishing a Department of Education with a Secretary of Education in the President's Cabinet.

ONCE-OVERS

Isn't it a fact that you think you have not had a fair chance in the world? You look back to your school days and you can pick out those who have surpassed you in achievement.

They were no brighter than you in class, if you could learn on the run.

Then there were the "diggers," those who would plod through their lessons, studying consistently and faithfully.

They did not fit in with the social life of the school, made up largely of those who applied the first and serious and tried to get through with as little effort as possible.

You belonged to the social spirit and that social spirit you have carried with you from your school days.

It is not so pronounced now because you have more sense, but it's there.

You are still averse to giving up your leisure for anything except what will bring you pleasure.

It is easy for you to attribute success in others to their good luck.

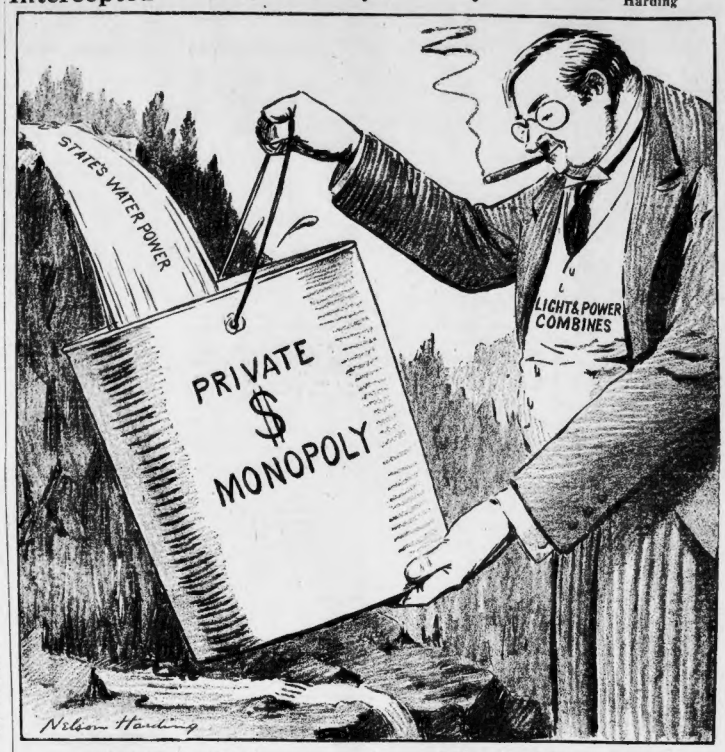
Intercepted

By Nelson Harding



As the Manitou, the mighty
Spirit of the vanished Redmen,
Traced the course of stream and river,
Saying to them, "Run in this way,"

So the Light and Power Giant,
With monopoly and merger,
Would control the water power
That belongs to all the People.

A Ship With No Crew

No Floating Ship Can Be Safe Hereafter in War

(Copyright, 1929)

A BATTLESHIP STEERED BY WIRELESS

This picture will interest you as part of planning for future wars. On the right you see the British battleship Centurion, a small radio receiving set in the stern.

There is NO CREW on that ship, no captain, seaman or engineer. Steam is up, power for the propeller is there. Officers on the boat on the left, a "destroyer," direct the bigger ship on the right, using the wireless apparatus to steer it by.

Airplanes overhead practice dropping bombs, without explosives in them of course, on the big battleship which twists and turns in obedience to a rudder controlled by wireless from the destroyer.

It is a marvelous achievement of modern science, very instructive, by the way, for those interested in the safety of THIS country and future war possibilities.

British naval authorities realize that old-fashioned battleships, offering a target on the surface of the water, are entirely out of date, horribly unsafe for any crew, in the face of attack by airplanes overhead and submarines below.

The "ship without a crew" would make it possible to send out fighting ships that could ram other ships, and, without endangering a crew, doing almost anything that a battleship could do.

Already the attendant destroyer, controlling the big ship by wireless, can steer it, control its power. Another step will enable the attendant ship to discharge the guns on the battleship, the attendant ship itself remaining at a safe distance.

The airplane with its terrific explosive bombs and deadly gases, the submarine working unseen from below are THE REALITIES of today.

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

NEW YORK, Sept. 24—Naval disarmament business has now reached collapsible proportions.

England and America are busily wrecking themselves. It's a panic of economy.

For every cruiser that isn't launched there will be a bottle of champagne saved.

In ten more years there will be no navies. The next war on water will be a canoe tournament on Lake Placid.

The secretary of the navy will resign in a well-nourished body. His place will be amply covered by the secretary of junk.

Other navy officials will be:

Premier of scrap.

Secretary of wreckage.

Commissioner of second-hand patriotism.

Ambassador of used cars.

Board of barnacles.

Admiral of sunken fleets.

In order to carry on this delicious display of pacifism we advise all nations to commemorate notable victories on land and sea by breaking up other things.

When our Olympic teams clean up on track and field it will be President Hoover's job to smack the parlor lamp with an axe.

If Snowden objects to this, Andy Mellon can explain:

"We won but we showed our friendly spirit by breaking something up

"When Europe pays our war accumulations and other by-products of peace commissions, I am going to scrap my back collar button.

Such an act of self denial and astigmatism will prove that we have no desire to rule the world with a band of iron.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"HAVE you noticed," writes Julia T., "what a number of people there are who give out nothing at all when you meet them? You exert yourself to be pleasant, you wear yourself out trying to get their interest, but they remain placid. They actually ABSORB you and at the end you feel as if you hadn't gotten anywhere at all."

Have I noticed 'em? I have, indeed, Julia. And for long, laborous years I felt, as you evidently feel, that I should be pleasant to such human blotters. I felt, in fact, that I should be a Little Friend to All the World. Friendship, I had been taught, was not only a pleasure but a duty. I should welcome everyone to my heart and find their Hidden Worth. Many people, to be sure, didn't seem to be hiding any worth to speak of. But that was due to my blindness. They all had Hearts of Gold, if I'd only look for them.

So I went around looking for Hearts of Gold. Anyone who wanted my time had it. When I think now of the bores I've listened to—the chronic whiners, the gossips, the giddy gabbers!—I was a meeting place for them all. I accumulated people like some folks accumulate postage stamps or bugs. My life was full of people. There was no room for anything else.

Of course, I kidded myself into thinking that I did it because I had a Noble Heart. But actually it tickled my vanity to think that I was so "popular." It hadn't, as yet, occurred to me that any sap could have THAT form of popularity.

Then one day I came to and did some auditing.

AND I SAW THAT PEOPLE COULD BECOME AS BAD A VICE AS ANY OTHER FORM OF ADDICTION.

There are people who are worth your time—people upon whom you should bestow your time and interest gratefully, eagerly. But there are thousands 'n' thousands who aren't worth your time, against whom you should fence your life.

It is NOT an admirable thing to "like everyone" for be liked by everyone. Stevenson once said that if during his lifetime a man made six real friends he was lucky. There spoke a wise and discriminating soul!

YOUR TIME IS A PRECIOUS AND PERISHABLE TREASURE —YOUR ENERGY IS A RARE POSSESSION. THEY SHOULD NOT BE GIVEN AWAY TOO EASILY OR WASTED. They should not be abandoned to bores or shared with silly idlers.

And this applies quite as much to the members of one's own family as to strangers. Family parties, family calls, family chit-chat can ruin more good time than an epidemic. We should have as much right to protect ourselves against the interruptions and trifling demands of our relations as against any other nuisance—BUT TRY AND DO IT!

After I took inventory, I made a formula for myself. I had been at the mercy of everyone who wanted to run into my living room or office or ring my telephone. I had about as much privacy as the Grand Central Station. But from that day on I dug myself in.

To the worst pest of all the Phone Friends, I said—"I'm sorry but I can't talk. I'm busy," and thereupon hung up. To the dropper-in I said exactly the same thing—giving them the social equivalent of what was once ingeniously called "the bum's rush." Did it make me popular? It did NOT.

Popularity hopped off me like fleas off a wet pup. And, oh lady, but I was glad to see it go. For at last I had a chance to do a little visiting with MYSELF.

Now, when I want to make a friend, I make one deliberately. But my interest is no longer a bubble fountain, on tap for any loitering loafer.

Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

Joy comes for all day long,
Though the hours slowly go,
In the laughter and the song
That my childhood used to know.
Echoes ringing down the years,
Lilting lightly, gay and sweet,
Bring me joys to banish fears
And to make all cares retreat.
Even though some griefs should fall
Like swift shadows on my days
There was joy enough for all
Blooming in life's morning ways.
Joy enough to keep me glad,
Thrusting discord far away,
Lingers from the bliss I had
When life flowered like the May.
Though the flying years outspire,
Daily stealing youth and grace,
Joy enough for all desire

New York Day by Day

By O. O. M'INTYRE

NEW YORK, Sept. 24—New York has for years snubbed anything smacking of civic boosting. It has the superior notion there is no need to emphasize the wonders. With an arched and phony little smile it left that for Babbitts and Rotarians in the high grass.

Lately, however, has come a sudden realization the metropolis might indulge a little professional glad handing. There is no denying business was off this summer on account of the lack of tourists. A mistaken idea is abroad New York should be avoided in hot weather.

As a matter of fact, outside of the fall season the most delightful period is between the first of June and the first of September. There are sporadic heat waves but nights are cool and the metropolis is within an hour of innumerable seaside resorts.

Hotels are worst sufferers when the "floating population" ceases to float. And such stagnation hits other business. The Merchants' Association is aroused to the situation and is out to sell the big town to the rest of the country with a few California-like whoops.

Most of us who live in New York for many years acquire a smug diffidence. We constantly see so many strangers we grow totally unconscious of their presence until they go elsewhere. A stiff-necked attitude is little help in increasing holidaying tourists.

High-nosed boasts of Manhattan's marvels are scarcely necessary. These are apparent. But a little thawing out and cross-roads back-slapping are obviously needed. The chief complaint against New York has always been it is cold and scrupulously distant.

The Merchants' Association is asking citizens to limber up—to show a more considerate spirit of courtesy toward the stranger. It appeals especially to taxi drivers and policemen. New York extends itself toward foreign nobodies and neglects its countrymen. It is paying the price.

A cafe on West 34th street has a proprietor who sensed the loneliness of the average New Yorker. His food is not above the average, but he is at his door nightly to be [illegible] ago it was a little room with eight tables. Now he occupies three large rooms with 120 tables.

New York's shuddery Death Avenue is soon to go. It long provided a creepy touch in the metropolitan panorama. On Tenth ave. freight trains are hourly switching in the middle of the street. Here one sees the "pony riders." They are young Paul Reveres gathering ahead of engines waving red lanterns and ringing a 'hand bell. Many became jockeys and a few famous ones.

An actress who cannot forget acting off stage attended an after-theater party the other night, still lathered in the grease paint emolliensism of her role. A character actor masqueraded as a famous producer she had never seen but wanted to meet. After parading her stuff with gestures, someone jerked off his wig. And the lady sailed for Europe next day—to forget.

A revue skit concerns a husband kissing his wife goodby for a business trip, returning suddenly to see a uniformed doorman disappear in a closet. Yanking out a revolver, he cries: "If the man in a uniform doesn't come out by time I count three I begin firing!" At that a parade of men in uniforms comes out. And when it wound up with a patrolman on horseback, the fellow rolling into the aisle with the ad-libs was a columnist who may, as well be nameless.

Unsolicited letter from a Maine college professor: "A newspaper column should be at once meaty and juicy, but sprinkled with spice. But, most important of all, it must be served hot!"

Would you suggest, white or rye bread, professor?
